New $1,000,000,000 Defense Tax Predicted; Nazi Planes Bomb Britain Hour-After-Hour

George Sees Levy Linked to Arms Increase

Believes Excess Profits Unable To Finance Revenue Required.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 7.—A new $1,000,000,000 annual increase in taxes may be proposed, it was reported today, as companion legislation to the projected $5,000,000,000 boost in national defense outlays.

President Roosevelt is expected to send a special message to congress by the middle of the week, asking for $4,000,000,000 in appropriations and contract authorizations for the army and $1,000,000,000 for the navy.

Senator George, Democrat, Georgia, a member of the senate finance committee, said it was his understanding that this huge new defense request would be linked with a tax increase of $1,000,000,000, although it was uncertain whether the President would allude in his message to the financing of the new program.

George said he thought a maximum of $350,000,000 additional could be raised by excess profits taxes on corporations, which the President already has suggested to congress. The remaining $650,000,000, he predicted, would have to be obtained from individuals and through miscellaneous sources.

Tax Revision Seen.
"In my judgment," the Georgia senator told reporters, "we are going to have to start work right away on the skeleton of a tax bill. It will have to be based on a thorough-going revision of the tax system and it probably will take months to do the job right."

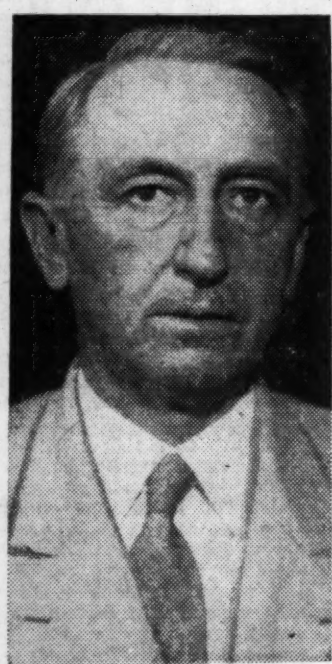

Although this will be a short work week—the plan is to recess Thursday until after next week's Democratic convention—congressional leaders hope to complete action on the Knox and Stimson cabinet appointments, the $4,000,000,000 naval expansion bill and the Hatch political practices measure.

Deficit May Mount.
The talk of new taxes as a result of the expanded defense program was coupled with speculation that it might be necessary, too, to authorize a further increase in the public debt.

The defense tax law authorized a $4,000,000,000 boost to $49,000,000,000, but George said he doubted that this increase would be enough to care for the mounting deficit if any large amount of immediate appropriations were involved.

DRAWS TAX PICTURE—Senator George, of Georgia, member of the senate finance committee, yesterday saw still another tax increase as likely, to accompany the proposal for the latest defense outlay.

Camp Opens Here Today For Civilians

160 Business, Professional Men Will Train at Fort McPherson.

The south makes one of its first active moves in the nation's expanding defense program as business and professional men from eight states arrive at the Fort McPherson military reservation for 30 days of special training.

The enrollees, 160, of them, ranging between 25 and 50 years of age—including lawyers, editors, presidents of corporations, manufacturers, and salesmen—paid their own expenses to get a "taste" of military maneuvers in the C. M. T. C. course starting today. They will "get the works" in drills, marches and work with rifles, machine guns and heavier weapons just as younger men receive.

The training is a revival of the "Plattsburg plan," which was begun at Plattsburg, N. Y., in 1916, and is designed to give military background to the older men of the fourth corps area. Eight other similar camps are scattered throughout the country.

What is "the works" in military? The answer may be found in the training schedule completed over the week end by Lieutenant Colonel Clifford R. Jones, camp commander.

It calls for: Plenty of hiking, drilling, or just plain walking; a day's work beginning at 5:45 o'clock and ending after 4 o'clock, with a brisk "eye-opener" of calisthenics at 6 o'clock; assignments calling for digging and shoveling for entrenchments, and "foxholes"; regular drilling in first aid, sanitation, fire regulations, guard duty, military discipline, and courtesy; use of the rifle and automatic pistols, including firing from all positions, carrying in drills, cleaning and stripping, and assembling; pitching tents in the field, carrying rifle and full packs, extended order drilling on the march; actual contact with gas, study of employment of and defense against chemicals; in spare time, a program of athletics such as baseball, volley ball, golf, tennis, etc.

Although the camp opens today, applications will be received until Thursday night. Organization work takes place today. Formal camp opening will be tomorrow, when Governor Rivers and former Governor John M. Slaton, of Georgia, and Mayor William B. Hartsfield, of Atlanta, are to address the enrollees.

Thousands See Deadly Battles Above Cities

Hitler and Ciano Discuss English Offensive and 'New Europe.'

By The Associated Press.
Thousands of Englishmen who sought peace and quiet on weekend jaunts to the countryside found instead that they were unbidden witnesses to a deadly phase of the battle for England—a day-long series of German bombing raids, occurring hour after hour, that lasted through yesterday until early today.

While the air battles were raging, Adolf Hitler and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano of Italy apparently were discussing Britain's plight and plans for a "new Europe."

Fascinated spectators felt the earth shake with the blasts of high-explosive and delayed-fuse bombs which the Germans showered down on widespread areas. They cheered to the echo as British fighter planes and antiaircraft guns shot down at least four of the enemy in flames that were quickly extinguished off the southeast coast.

At Least Five Killed.
At least five persons, including a policeman, were killed by the German bombs, and a number suffered injuries. Homes were splintered, and the delayed-action missiles added a new peril.

The German planes, penetrated the English coastal defenses in small groups, then split up into still smaller units of three or four and engaged in spectacular dog-fights with British pilots.

The sky was starry with vivid flashes of gunfire. The noise of bombs and antiaircraft cannon provided a steady undertone for the shriller crack of machine guns and the high whine of racing motors and screaming struts.

One British Plane Lost.
The air ministry said one British plane was lost. "A German plane of the fighter type was moving in an easterly direction," one witness said. "We saw another plane high above it go into a dive and plunge like a stone for several thousand feet. Then there was the stutter of machine guns, and the German machine became a mass of flames and fell."

A British fighter had won his combat. One British fighter was seen to climb almost vertically at giddy speed, right on the tail of an enemy fighter into which it was pouring a stream of tracer bullets. Indicating the British were not letting these German blows go unanswered in kind, the German radio stations at Hamburg and Bremen suddenly went silent Sunday night—as they do when British bombers draw near.

The conference between Hitler and Ciano was held in Berlin. Reuters, British news agency, said the conference was to discuss plans for an offensive.

Plan For 'New Europe.'
Strengthening this belief, a Berlin correspondent for Stefani, the Italian news agency, said the Axis powers' high representatives had reached "complete agreement" on continuation and development of the war and construction of a "new Europe" when it is ended.

'BIG JIM' KNOWS NOW—James A. Farley (right) learned 1940's No. 1 political secret yesterday. President Roosevelt (left) has made a definite decision on the third term issue, and told it to his postmaster general. Farley later told the press the Roosevelt decision had been made, but did he reveal it? He did not! The two are shown together at the meeting where Farley gained information, long sought by the nation.

Sunday Coldest July Day Here In 42 Years

Mercury Drops to 58; Polar Spell May Break Tomorrow.

"Mr. and Mrs. Atlanta: You can keep those winter clothes in storage a few months longer."

George W. Mindling, chief of the Atlanta Weather Bureau, gave that advice, though yesterday was the coldest July day in Atlanta in 42 years.

Despite the fact that the mercury dipped to 58 degrees, within two-tenths of a degree of the all-time record for July, there's nothing serious to worry about, Mr. Mindling said.

Sun Blacked Out.
Any rumors that a polar front is advancing southward are in the common vernacular the "bunk." Atlanta has had cold weather simply because the skies have been so cloudy the sun couldn't shine through to warm up things.

As matters stand now, cloudy skies, with scattered showers, will continue through today, with slowly rising temperatures. Unless there's a sudden change in the meteorological map the cold, rainy spell should break tomorrow or Wednesday, bringing real summer weather back to the city.

Today the mercury is expected to climb to a high of 72 degrees, with a low reading of 63 forecast.

45 in Yellowstone.
Yesterday's low of 58 was reached at 6 o'clock in the morning, the forecaster reported, but though it was cold weather for Atlanta, many eastern cities reported even lower temperatures. The coldest reading was 45 degrees, in Yellowstone National Park.

With a high temperature of 68, reached at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the mean for the day was 63, 15 degrees below the normal average temperature, Mindling said. A total of .28 inch of rain fell during the 24-hour period.

F. D. R. Bares Historic Decision On Third Term Race to Farley

Chairman Close-Mouthed on What 'Boss' Told Him Except To Say: 'I Had a Very Satisfactory Talk With the President.'

HYDE PARK, N. Y., July 7.—(P)—President Roosevelt has made his historic decision on the third term issue.

He disclosed it today to James A. Farley, national Democratic chairman. But Farley would not say whether Mr. Roosevelt had determined to attempt to shatter the third-term precedent or leave the White House next January.

"Satisfactory Talk."
The Chief Executive made his decision known to the man who has been for years one of his ablest political aides, but Farley merely told reporters:

"I had a very satisfactory talk with the President and I have full knowledge of his thoughts and what he has in mind. But I will not discuss it with any individual."

He said it was up to the President to make any announcement at the time of his choosing.

Silent on Date.
Farley fended off every effort by reporters to learn whether the third-term announcement would come before the Democratic convention, opening in Chicago a week from tomorrow, or whether the delegates would know the President's views in advance of the nominating speeches.

Three times the Democratic national chairman repeated that he had had a satisfactory talk with the chief executive, both from his own, and, he thought, the President's point of view. He said they had gone into every phase of the "present-day political situation and the future of the party," but that any additional comment must come from Mr. Roosevelt. He said that he felt the people wanted to retain the Democratic party in power.

"Will you continue to work to that end?" he was asked.

But Farley ducked that one by brushing it aside as a leading question.

(Farley made no effort to deny that he is planning to step out of the government, the United Press said.)

Although he declined to give any clue to the President's intentions, he said nothing to subtract from the views of many Democratic leaders that there were increasing indications Mr. Roosevelt would break with tradition and agree to be drafted for a third term.

More than two-thirds of convention delegates are pledged or semi-pledged to a third term and Mr. Roosevelt's nomination apparently is assured if he wants it.

Barrage of Questions.
Farley faced a barrage of questions in the temporary White House offices following his two-hour parley with "the boss."

He was silent on his own political future. He said he did not want to comment now on "that very nice story" about his taking over the Yankees. Sometime during the convention, he said, he will announce what he intends to do.

He and the President, Farley said, talked with utter frankness.

"I think I have full knowledge of what he proposes to do," Farley asserted. "But that is up to him to discuss."

He said he and the President had conversed about the Democratic platform and that he hoped it would be short.

Size of Platform.
"I'll start off by saying I discussed with the President the plans already perfected for the Chicago convention and the detailed plans that still must be perfected," he said.

"I also discussed with him the kind of platform and size of the platform I hope will be adopted. Every effort will be made to conduct a dignified convention with no by-plays or frivolities of any character—a convention that will be free of all criticism."

Machineguns Rattle, Bombs Deal Death As Factions Clash

Two U. S. Citizens Wounded, One Probably Fatally; Almazan Claims Victory Over Cardenas' Man.

By BEN F. MEYER.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

MEXICO CITY, July 7.—Mexico counted 100 or more slain and thousands injured, including two seriously wounded United States citizens, as rival political factions matched gunfire with each other and with soldiers and police today in the blazing, riotous climax to a bitter presidential campaign.

While the casualties mounted, with the greatest number in Mexico City itself, the count of ballots will not be made until next Thursday. It then remains for the government to decide whether results will be announced before the official figures are presented to the congress that meets September 1.

Both General Avila Camacho, the candidate backed by the present administration, and his rival, General Juan Andreu Almazan, claimed certain victory while their followers did bloody battle around the polling places.

The estimate of more than 100 dead came from General Almazan. Mexico City police said a score of persons died and 100 were injured in this capital alone, and the toll was expected to go higher. Shootings were reported from various other cities, although in the north, near the United States border, the election was comparatively quiet.

U. S. Man Near Death.
The wounded Americans were Edward J. Mallen Jr., of Davenport, Iowa, shot through the stomach and believed near death, and Leonard Durso, 18, a Georgetown University student of Union City, N. J., who suffered a rifle bullet in the left side. Both were shot in riots in the heart of the capital.

Ivan Hasselocher, son of the commercial attaché of the Brazilian embassy in Washington, received a slight flesh wound in the back in the same clash in which Durso was shot.

Two Youths Escape.
Francis E. Maloney Jr., of Washington, D. C., and Parkman Clancy, of Tacoma Park, Md., also Georgetown students, accompanied the injured youths. Both escaped the flying bullets.

Rifles, pistols, machine guns, hand grenades and tear gas bombs were used freely in the fighting in Mexico City and the federal district.

Fake SOS Says U. S. Destroyer Struck by German Submarine

WASHINGTON, July 7.—(P)—A mysterious SOS reporting that the U. S. Destroyer Barry had been struck by a German submarine and was sinking caused the government an anxious two hours today, before it determined that the message was strictly phony.

Picked up in the first place by Mackay Radio, the SOS said: "Sinking slowly, hit by German submarine; water in hold; can last three hours." The position given was 400 miles off the coast of Spain.

The navy, whose own communications system had not picked up the message, busily checked it and then reported:

"The navy has received a communication directly from the Barry and she is not in distress. She is peacefully at anchor."

Ben F. Meyer, chief of the Associated Press bureau in Mexico, who wrote the story of the election riots while bullets and bombs rattled outside his office, is a former Atlantan. He served as day editor of the Associated Press in Atlanta.

Almazan announced that the dead included Colonel Vicente Obregon, former director of mails and telegraphs, and former General Melchor Gonzales, and blamed Avila Camacho followers for their slayings.

Cardenas Tours City.
President Cardenas, whose administration is backing Avila Camacho, toured polling places during the day, frequently exchanging banter with Almazan followers who crowded around and stopped his car. He declined to make a statement as the voting ended, however.

In Mexico City, police mounted and afoot, fought with a great throng on Paseo de la Reforma, one of the capital's most beautiful boulevards, at a point almost in front of the foreign office.

The police swung clubs freely and drove the crowd back with their horses, firing over the heads of the demonstrators, who angrily shouted, "Viva Almazan!" for the anti-demonstration candidate.

PRM, the administration political party of President Cardenas, announced over the radio that "Avila Camacho has triumphed throughout the country."

The broadcast was interrupted.

U. S. Refugees, In Foul Mood, Sail for Home

Woman Passenger Mistakes Naval Commander for Hotel Porter.

GALWAY, Ireland, July 7.—(AP) Approximately 1,600 Americans fleeing the possibility of German invasion of the British Isles sailed for home today aboard the United States liner Galway.

The liner weighed anchor at 6:45 a. m. (12:45 a. m., Atlanta time), but was delayed by fog in making her way down Galway bay and did not leave Irish waters until 3 p. m.

Much confusion marked the sailing. A number of trunks were lost. Many passengers were without a change of apparel. Most of the lost luggage was believed mislaid in Euston station in London.

There was much grumbling among the passengers, especially about the lack of facilities in Galway after they were rushed there far ahead of schedule because of reports that the Washington would sail Friday night. Many found no housing accommodations and no chance of boarding the liner because of tidal conditions. The passengers were transported to the ship in tenders. Shattered nerves caused many mixups.

A woman passenger insisted that Commander Norman Hitchcock, naval attaché in the United States embassy in London, "take my bags to my hotel." She thought he was a hotel porter.

Two United States army majors were appealed to by a group of passengers who thought they were railway employees.

FOE OF MEXICAN PRESIDENT—General Juan Andreu Almazan, opposed by the Cardenas administration for the Mexican presidency, claimed he was leading in the Mexican election yesterday in which his followers clashed with the opposition, killing and injuring hundreds.

Citizens Brave Gun Battles To Cast Ballots

Police On Rooftops, Snipers in House, Stage Battle.

By WILLIAM D. PATTERSON. MEXICO CITY, July 7.—(AP) A tour through the streets of this capital to observe progress of balloting that climaxed Mexico's tense presidential campaign today proved a perilous adventure.

I personally encountered three small-scale battles in which tear gas bombs, machine guns, rifles and pistols were used as police and soldiers fought with members of various political groups.

As I write this, I still can hear gunfire and bomb-blasts.

Despite the very real danger of moving about on the streets and going to the polls, citizens turned out by the thousands, and the impression gained at various voting places was that thousands of them were voting for General Juan Andreu Almazan, anti-administration candidate.

Own Voting Places.

In efforts to prevent Almazan being "counted out" by the government faction which favors General Manuel Avila Camacho, many Almazan supporters organized their own voting places across the street from the official government polls.

Truckloads of soldiers, with machineguns and rifles, patrolled the streets constantly. Army cavalry in police uniforms, on motorcycles, on horseback and afoot were everywhere but failed to prevent frequent clashes.

While driving to General Almazan's headquarters, I got in the midst of a score of policemen battling a group of supporters of Avila Camacho, though he is the government's candidate.

The Avila Camacho crowd had fired on a group of voters in front of an Almazan booth. Police on roofs and in the street were busily firing at the Camachistas, who took refuge in an untenanted apartment house. The police closed in and I saw them kill three gunmen fleeing across the roofs.

Another Battle.

Inside Almazan's headquarters, the candidate calmly insisted: "These racketeers cannot defeat the people."

Leaving him, I soon came across another group of soldiers who were firing at unidentified men on the roofs.

Returning toward the Associated Press office, I saw soldiers firing down Juarez avenue, one of the capital's principal streets. An officer said they were fighting a group which had discharged pistols into a crowd on the street.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(AP)—Special details of police today were assigned to guard all electric power stations and gas storage tanks of the Consolidated-Edison Company following new bomb threats.

MEXICAN CONFETTI—This truck load of rocks, just right for throwing, arrived in time to furnish unionists plenty of ammunition to use against students in clashes preceding Mexico's presidential election yesterday. The students favored General Almazan, anti-administration candidate.

however, as the announcer yelled into the microphone:

"Almazanistas are attacking our station here on the Avenida Cinco de Mayo (in the downtown business district) because of our announcements."

General Almazan issued copies of various announcements which he said had been prepared yesterday and were being read today over the radio, claiming victory for Avila Camacho.

The Almazan faction appeared to have gained control at least in the entire federal district, and surrounded the headquarters of the administration party.

Warfare in Streets.

Shots were exchanged between the crowd and those in the PRM building as this story was written.

The firing of rifles and pistols and the bursting of gas bombs could be heard clearly in the Associated Press office, which is nearby.

A translator for the Associated Press bureau telephoned that he would be late for work because he had taken refuge inside the Automobile Workers' Union building when shooting started and he could not get out.

A hospital nurse called to report that one Associated Press messenger boy had been shot in the arm.

Shoot Behind Reporter.

Wayne Thomas, of the Chicago Tribune, dashed to safety in the (AP) office, exclaiming:

"Gee, I had to run! They were shooting right behind me. A man was shot a few feet from me."

From throughout Mexico came reports of seizure of polling places before they opened, of a lack of ballots, and of refusal to permit known followers of Almazan to vote.

Cardenas was unable to vote because the polling place near his residence did not open.

In Aguas Calientes, City Clerk Jesus Bernal was shot in the head and critically wounded. Monterey reported one dead, Coahuila one, and Vera Cruz two.

The clash at Puebla was reported to have occurred between citizens and soldiers when a group of 300 Almazan followers descended on the polling place.

Scores of polling places in the federal district were raided by roving bands, shooting from buses and automobiles. Some polling places were burned.

Garner Opens Headquarters For Convention

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP)—Vice President John N. Garner took the lead in pre-convention activities today, with the opening of headquarters for his campaign for the Presidential nomination at the Democratic party's $10,000,000 show, which opens here July 15.

A vanguard of his campaign staff, transferred here from Dallas, Texas, tacked up "Go With Garner" placards in a mezzanine suite at the Sherman hotel and announced they were ready for business.

Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, who had said he would run for the presidency if Mr. Roosevelt did not, reserved pretentious quarters at the Stevens Hotel but it wasn't known whether he would set up a staff.

Headquarters will be opened this week for Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, who has announced his name will be placed in nomination even if Mr. Roosevelt is a candidate.

a drive against British control of the Mediterranean sea by striking at Gibraltar and Egypt.

Some observers felt, however, that the deliberations might be of a political rather than a military nature because Ciano was accompanied by diplomatic advisers and Hitler was joined by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Libyan Coast Raided.

Successes were reported for British air raiders in Africa and Scandinavia.

Warplanes of the fleet air arm raided German-held Bergen, Norway, the admiralty said, and when they felt "oil tanks were on fire and the greater part of the target area was obscured by thick black smoke from burning oil fuel."

But, on the other side, these heavy blows against Britain were reported:

By the Nazi high command: Successful repetition of German air attacks "on important military objectives in the south of England," such heavy damage to two destroyers in the middle North Sea "that they must be regarded as a total loss," a 6,000-ton merchantman sunk by a speedboat off the Isle of Wight and an 8,000-ton merchant ship set afire by a bomb hit. A submarine, an auxiliary warship and a patrol boat sunk and a 10,000-ton cruiser heavily damaged.

Malta Bombed.

By the Italian high command: "Successive waves of violent action against the air and naval bases at Malta," Britain's eastern Mediterranean stronghold, in which the Italian fliers' objectives all "were hit squarely, starting fires in arsenal zones that were visible at a long distance," hangars and fuel deposits hit and six parked British planes destroyed in attacks on three air bases in northern Africa.

Some observers felt, however, that the deliberations might be of a political rather than a military nature because Ciano was accompanied by diplomatic advisers and Hitler was joined by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Libyan Coast Raided.

Successes were reported for British air raiders in Africa and Scandinavia.

Warplanes of the fleet air arm raided German-held Bergen, Norway, the admiralty said, and when they felt "oil tanks were on fire and the greater part of the target area was obscured by thick black smoke from burning oil fuel."

But, on the other side, these heavy blows against Britain were reported:

Reverent Congregation Stands in Rain To Watch Ceremony.

The Rev. W. G. Kelly brought his religion to his 78-year-old mother, and yesterday baptized her at ceremonies held in a small swimming pool behind his church, while his congregation stood in a drizzling rain to watch.

The mother was Mrs. Luella Kelly, and the church was the Mount Carmel Christian on Candler road. It was one of the few instances in which a minister gets to baptize his own mother.

Previously postponed several times, the ceremony went off without a hitch and the pastor, when it was over, called it one of the happiest moments of his life.

Also baptized were Mrs. Jack Webb and Beck Bergquist, new members of the church.

The ceremony marked the second time Mrs. Kelly had been baptized. The first was as a little girl when she joined the Baptist church.

Then recently she transferred to the church of her son, and one of her requests was that he should baptize her.

Truett Invited To Return Here In July, 1941

7,000 Hear Famous Clergyman in Final Sermon of Series.

Dr. George W. Truett, of Dallas, Texas, internationally known minister and pastor of the largest Baptist church in the world, has been invited to return to Atlanta next July for a series of special meetings.

The invitation was extended last night as Dr. Truett concluded a series of meetings at the Druid Hills Baptist church and the city auditorium.

On a motion by Hugh H. Altman, chairman of the board of deacons of the Druid Hills Baptist church, which was seconded by W. Ches Smith, former chairman of the board, the 7,000 persons who packed the auditorium voted unanimously with a standing vote to invite the Dallas pastor back.

Altman's motion called for him to return here the first week in July or as near thereto as possible.

During the present engagement here, Dr. Truett has preached twice daily to thousands. In the morning he spoke at the Druid Hills Baptist church and in the evening at the auditorium.

La Follette Says U. S. Is in 'Terrible Danger'

CHICAGO, July 7.—(AP)—Philip F. La Follette, former Progressive Governor of Wisconsin, declared today that "our country is in danger—terrible danger—not alone from abroad but at home." "The same dry rot that wrecked Britain and France is here and the same Chamberlains," he asserted in a radio address. "But for 20 years our leaders—Republicans as well as Democrats—have failed to tell us the truth. They have preached false doctrines and adopted bad policies. Year after year our leaders have told us everything was all right, when down deep something was all wrong."

Fifth Column In France Aided Nazi Bombers

High French Officials Blackmailed Into Helping German Spies.

BILBAO, Spain, July 7.—(AP)—Military experts here say that one of the greatest single factors in the defeat of France was a Nazi "Fifth Column" attack more efficient than ever in any previous war.

This "assault from within" was described by two Americans who have just arrived in Bilbao. They said they saw flares shoot up during the German aerial bombardments of Le Havre and Bordeaux outlining areas to be raided within those French ports.

The Americans, who had entree to various French official circles, said an important French official was executed the day after the bombardment of Bordeaux.

Gave French "News." As an example of the contacts maintained with the German command by a little band of operators with wireless transmitters, the Americans repeated a story told by French soldiers on their return from the northern battlefields.

According to this story, loud-speakers in the German lines announced the names and numbers of French regiments which were coming up as reserves three days before the French soldiers at the front knew the facts themselves.

One of the most effective tricks devised by the Fifth Columnists was sprung when the Germans began driving swiftly southward into France. Nazi agents, posing as French officials, would telephone the mayors of communities in areas not immediately endangered, warn them the Germans were approaching and order immediate evacuation.

That was responsible in at least one case, the Americans said, for abandonment of a factory with more than 100 fully-completed fast, armored cars several days before the Germans arrived.

The Fifth Columnists so successfully undermined French morale by launching defeatist rumors that the government was forced to counsel the nation against believing anything not printed or broadcast officially.

France was a ripe field for recruiting Fifth Columnists because large numbers of foreigners had been admitted in the last 20 years, the Americans said, but some of the most efficient work was done by individuals in the upper political brackets, who were blackmailed into co-operating.

France before the war, they said, Germany sent reinforcements by ingenious methods. Some agents supposedly were dropped by parachutes which later were destroyed with small cans of acid.

The greatest influx, it was said, came disguised as Belgian refugees.

French police conducted energetic raids in an attempt to combat the Fifth Columnists, and toward the end were arresting all Germans regardless of whether they had specific reasons to suspect them. But by then the country was honeycombed with Nazi agents.

BOMBSHELL! That's his name for it. A splinter of mahogany, a bit of fabric... why, it's nothing but a shell with a motor. But when Clinton Ferguson clamps down the throttle of that motor, you've got the fastest combination in outboating today. Speed? More than that. Speed plus—plus one man's uncanny ability to wheedle and squeeze just a few extra miles per hour out of four cylinders and a propeller. Yes, it's the extras that win—even in cigarettes.

LEAN, WIRY, 135 pounds of nerve and driving skill. Hunched in that tiny pit—one hand on the wheel, the other on the throttle—he roars across the surface in a frothing skid against time. Half in, half out of the water, Clinton Ferguson never lets up. Turns? He takes them wide open...throws himself around...with a daring equaled only by the extra skill of his steering hand. Boats, drivers—cigarettes—it's the extras that set them apart...like the extra mildness of Camels.

THE "EXTRAS" of costlier, slower-burning tobaccos have made Camels the No. 1 cigarette in the field. And the explanation of these extras in Camels is just as scientific as it is logical. Too-fast burning in a cigarette creates excess heat. Excess heat ruins the delicate elements of mildness and flavor. Slower burning preserves flavor and aroma...naturally gives a cooler smoke. Camels, with their costlier tobaccos, give you extras that you won't find in any other cigarette—even a slower way of burning that means extra smoking per pack (see panel at right).

Airports—a Vital Need

Fulton and DeKalb counties wisely are seeking to rush provision of new airports for the vicinity of Atlanta. The need for these airports today is serious. Tomorrow they will be imperative and the earlier they are completed the more Atlanta and Atlantans will participate in the aviation picture of the future.

Under the huge plane production program of the government, many new fields will be a vital necessity, and the municipal fields such as Candler field will not be suited to military operations, nor could they provide the facilities necessary. Even in wartime commercial flying operations must be maintained, and Candler field, as the hub of southern aviation, could not be diverted to the use of military planes. Indeed, it is not improbable the operation of any but commercial ships from the field will be barred within a few years. Congestion resulting from commercial and private operations there today has been classed as dangerous.

The two fields are necessary. A year ago one would have been enough, but today the mushrooming of flying activities, resulting from the national defense program, makes it necessary that the two be provided in the shortest possible time. Both will have to be constructed as military fields enabling formation takeoffs and providing ample servicing facilities. The possibility that a National Guard air squadron will be established here should spur the efforts of the officials seeking the two fields. Manufacturers previously have expressed their interest in establishing factories at subsidiary airports near Atlanta, and the pilot training program of the CAA insures ample use of the fields without consideration of other private flying activities.

Exception might be taken to the attitude of opposing provision of the land for the airport if it took the land from the tax books. This falls to take into consideration the added revenues to be obtained from the establishment of more and more aviation facilities around Atlanta. There are the new and added taxes which would be paid by private companies at or near such an airport, the new residents attracted to the county by employment possibilities of expanding companies and there is the vital necessity of co-operating in every way possible for national defense.

It might be pointed out also that a better world era, sure to come, will not lessen the importance of the fields except in the fact that they will be changed over from emphasis on military to civil aviation, a development that is sure to follow the increasing interest in aviation spurred by the war. Aviation is one of the vast industries of the future. Its possibilities are limitless, and Atlanta should and must be a hub for flying activities in the south, just as it today is the center of most commercial operations throughout this rich and growing section.

Mrs. Eugenia Long Harper

The death Friday of Mrs. Eugenia Long Harper not only removed a useful and beloved citizen but served to remind us how brief has been the period dating from the discovery of ether as an anesthetic in operations.

Mrs. Harper was the daughter of Dr. Crawford W. Long, Georgia's great physician who was the first man in all the world to use ether in an operation.

The first eight or nine such operations so performed were done by Dr. Long in his small study at Jefferson, Ga. In that city last April was held a celebration of that discovery. Mrs. Harper attended and was greeted by Postmaster General James A. Farley, who sold to her the first stamp bearing the likeness of her father and commemorating his important discovery.

Mrs. Harper told Mr. Farley and friends of her recollections of her famous father; of his devotion to his profession, of his interest in and love for his children. She recalled his reading aloud to them from books by the masters, including, of course, Shakespeare, his favorite author.

It was a great day for Jefferson and for the daughter of the man who discovered the use of ether. It will come as a surprise to most persons to realize that mankind has enjoyed the boon of triumph over pain for so short a time that the daughter of the man who gave the world that freedom has just passed on into eternity.

As a newly fledged American, Dr. Albert (Relativity) Einstein will understand the process by which a ball team can be no games in the lead and still top the percentages.

Defense and Housing

One lesson the last war taught is being put into practice in a necessarily limited form by the United States Housing Authority in seeking to prevent the housing shortage in industrial towns incident to the expansion and establishment of defense industries and army and navy bases. At the same time, it may be pointed out that the government is seriously neglecting an important phase of defense in delaying construction of training camps and the barracks necessary for the handling of men who at the outset of a war would immediately be called into service.

But today it is even more necessary that housing facilities in key cities of the nation be provided for those who are brought in to serve either in the armed forces or in vital defense industries. Some examples of the service now being carried out by the USHA, with the limited funds available, is at Corpus Christi, Texas, where construction of a $25,000,000 naval air and sea base will require housing for low-income enlisted and civilian personnel; Montgomery, Ala., where Maxwell field is being converted into an advanced pilot training base; Pensacola, Fla., where expansion of training facilities is under way, and in the heavy industrial areas of Pennsylvania, where housing classed as defense projects is being constructed in Pittsburgh, McKeesport, Erie, Chester and Beaver county.

During the last war housing conditions in many major cities and near big army camps were serious, and as such played no small part in forcing real estate values far beyond their reasonable level. During this preparatory period it would be only short of criminal if the conditions of 1917-18 were repeated. Therefore, it is to be hoped private real estate operators and, where necessary, the federal government will concentrate upon the problem of furnishing housing facilities at a reasonable level. Otherwise the delicate balance of an entire economy may be thrown out of adjustment and untold hardship occasioned.

A lecturer on Switzerland points out that, strictly speaking, an Alp is not a peak but an upland meadow. Evidently the high lee, of hi-lee-hi-lo.

The Asiatic Problem

A genuine fear of Germany and Italy may in part have motivated the Japanese government in its recent pronouncements of a mild "Monroe Doctrine" for Asia. While the consideration of building a Japanese empire undoubtedly looms large across the deliberations of the Nipponese, it is equally evident that Axis victories have and will complicate the Asiatic picture.

It should be remembered the membership of Tokyo in the Axis prior to the Hitler-Stalin pact was an unnatural partnership. It was a marriage of convenience, not of love. For a century Japanese friendship and Japanese trade have rested with the great Anglo-Saxon nations. When, under the control of the military clique, Japan moved into Manchuria, the people of that country forfeited, in some measure, the friendship of the British and American governments. The sanctity of treaties had been rudely shattered by that action. If Britain had supported the United States in insisting upon the observance of treaties by Japan, it is possible that there would have been no European war today. Some middle ground possibly could have been found. It was not, and the terrible chain of broken treaties and conquest followed in quick succession. Japan swung into the orbit of the have-not nations. The move into China proper followed.

Japan has no illusions concerning the Axis powers. And this may explain why she has insisted, first, upon maintenance of the status quo in the Dutch East Indies and now for return of possessions and rights of the western powers on the Asiatic mainland. There is also the account of the German mandated islands in the Pacific to be considered, both by Japan and by the United States. They are under the control of the Japanese, reportedly have been armed by the Japanese, who would like nothing less than to have an imperialistic Germany in possession of the islands menacing her trade routes.

Japan has acted the part of an international gangster. There can be no gainsaying that fact. But it will be advantageous to remember now that the island empire is menaced strongly by the same enemy the western powers face across the narrow straits of Dover. Her reactions will be with that in mind.

An acid note crept into the Churchill farewell to France. Also into the G. O. P.'s to Knox and Stimson, now in the hands of the foe. The captives, they suggest, are more to be censured than pitied.

"Man is the only animal that laughs." Patient research through recent history fails to show what causes this.

As famine begins to rear its ugly head abroad, we may hear more of those wood-product foods. Termites in the picnic layer-cake are a gruesome thought.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

TALK OF THE WEEK WASHINGTON, July 5.—After these last weeks, you might suppose that the service departments of the government would be satisfied. Billions have been asked for the navy, additional billions for the army, fully substantiating the predictions in this space that the original defense requests would be found to be ridiculously inadequate. Both the War and Navy Departments are now gorged with money, and will get their needed equipment as soon as the energy and ingenuity of American industry can produce it.

But the army, very wisely, is almost as dissatisfied as ever. For equipment is useless without men trained to use it. And men will not be trained unless a national compulsory selective service act is passed without delay.

Something of the dimensions of the problem which is now disrupting the high War Department officials may be gathered from the recruiting figures. This spring the army set out to recruit only 15,000 men. Recruits came in at an incredibly slow rate, around 1,000 a week, so that if such a recruiting program were continuously carried on no more than about 50,000 could possibly be recruited in a year. And instead of 50,000 a year, the army men want 50,000 recruits a month, and want them now. They point out, with the deepest anxiety, that trouble may break out in South America this summer. They recall that training troops takes a long time, and they argue that since some of the potential teachers—the existing force—may soon be diverted to other duties, there is no time to waste.

A compulsory service bill is now before congress. In most respects the army men consider it well drawn, although an authoritative group are inclined to believe that in view of the complexity of modern weapons, the bill's stated training period of eight months is considerably too short. The main point is that while there have been private intimations the President would eventually back the compulsory service bill, he has done nothing more for it to date than to endorse a newspaper editorial calling for such a service. Compulsory service and the President's plan for youth training are quite different things. Wise army men are desperately worried lest opposition to youth training sink compulsory service, and lest the mere appropriations of billions of dollars nullify the country into a foolish forgetfulness of its need for men.

MR. WILLKIE AND MR. PEW Joseph Pew, who owns a large chunk of the Sun Oil Company and has a first mortgage on most of the Republican organization in Pennsylvania, is reported to be one of the few Republican leaders who have not yet congratulated Wendell Willkie on his nomination. Willkie has made a remark at a press conference quite harshly calculated to conciliate Pew. Besides demonstrating Willkie's lack of candor—the few men in his position care to flout organization leaders—the Pew-Willkie situation has an interesting background.

Willkie and Pew had not met each other when Willkie became an active candidate for the presidency. Pew did not like Willkie to start with, however, and was further prejudiced by the mis-report of a remark of Willkie's, which transformed it into an attack on Pew. Thus Willkie, leaving small hope of Pew's help, began to go after the Pennsylvania delegates as soon as he reached Philadelphia. Pew was unsuccessfully invited Willkie and Mrs. Willkie to the same Saturday-evening convention dinner at which he entertained Senator and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, became actively perturbed by the Willkie raids on his forces. He conveyed a suggestion to Willkie that if Willkie would leave the Pennsylvania delegation alone, the Pennsylvanians would go for Willkie should Governor James prove to have no chance.

This offer was rejected by Willkie, on the urging of his political advisers, both because he wanted to show strength in Pennsylvania from the start, and because he did not wish to put his fate in the hands of another man. The raids on the Pennsylvanians continued, and before long a rumor circulated that Pew had promised support to Taft. In the end the Pennsylvanians missed the boat completely, leaving a residue of ill-feeling between Pew and Willkie, and so it is said, between many lesser figures in the Pennsylvania organization and their leader.

RAYBURN V. P. Add to the list of Democratic vice presidential candidates to be seriously watched the name of House Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas. Both his record and his place of origin make Rayburn a good choice. He is said to be ready to take the job, which Justice William O. Douglas has now stated quite firmly he does not want. And Rayburn's friends are enthusiastic and active.

IT IS UP TO US

Editor Constitution: In the elections this fall, both state and national, it would be well for us before casting our ballots, to decide upon the merits of the candidates. Not as we have done heretofore, upon their experience and past record, to cope with state and national affairs alone, but also upon their experience and past record as to their ability and views on the world situation of today. In deciding for one, I intend to give considerable weight to the candidates' past record of performance and not so much to promised future performance. This is a time in the history of our country that we cannot afford to experiment, neither can we afford petty partisan politics.

Within the next four years we will have retained or lost our place in the sun, as a leading democracy of the world. Therefore it is the sacred duty of each of us to choose the recipient of our ballot with utmost care and profound deliberation. Our future course of action will be definitely shaped within the next four years. We, as voters, shall be responsible for the pattern that we choose.

QUESTIONS ADVISABILITY OF RELIEF

Editor Constitution: Fashionable benevolence, which operates on the principle that far sufferers have the right to demand relief, is now saved from the contentment of the Lazarus in our gate while it comforts Europe's unfortunate millions. The hard question might once be asked, what portion of Europe's eminent benefactors are really profiting? Kindness to Norway, Denmark, Belgium, Holland, France—is it not kindness to Adolf Hitler?

These countries are under the complete control of the Germans, whose new order demands that the conquered nations surrender their resources with their independence. On the other hand, Germany must preserve order and a certain degree of physical prosperity among her vassals, for she intends to use them and their supplies in the subjugation of England. Famine, therefore, and pestilence in France would be a blow to Hitler; food and medicine for France might be but a gift to him; and America ought to exercise the greatest caution in her efforts at relief, if she has any true desire that democracy may survive.

The suggestion, however, would be most unwise that all relief for Europe be stopped. Careful administration must insure that America confers no great advantages upon Germany, and, though a beaten France may be past aid, there remains abundant material for the practice of genuine charity in Great Britain. Since gifts to the British will afford quite as much

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Second and First Loves pect, of Port Chester, N. Y., it is possible today to present clearly the sentiments of a native American who retains affection for Italy and to discuss those sentiments from the standpoint of those who feel no tie to any other country.

Mr. Capaci says I have yet to learn that "the United States of Italian origin is a fine and upright citizen as the descendant of any other race; that Italy's contribution to the United States has been very, very great; that every United Stateser of Italian origin lives first for the United States."

But that does not mean, he says, that the same man has not a second love.

"For everyone in the United States has a second love," he writes, "and, the country consisting of peoples of every land, it is but natural that these same people retain affections for their erstwhile lands. To think otherwise is infantile."

First, let me say that I have never disparaged the honor or citizenship of "the United Stateser of Italian origin."

I have, however, pointed out that some Americans of Italian origin, or blood, have silently acquiesced in the most hateful disparagement of the American people by the Italian press, but have been quick to resent truthful comment regarding Italy.

Two-Timing America Mr. Capaci has ever denounced with equal passion, or even taken mild exception to, the constant hostility of the official Italian press toward the country for which he "lives first." After all, when Mussolini's press calls the United States a nation of gangsters that goes for Mr. Capaci. And if he does not resent it he has no right to object to expressions of resentment by other Americans who have no "second love." If he doesn't mind being called a gangster he speaks only for himself.

I realize, of course, that Americans who feel as he does toward Italy have been put on a spot, but submit that it was Mussolini who put them on the spot. But he certainly doesn't voice the feelings of all Americans of Italian origin, for there are many others who detest Fascism and feel no pride but humiliation for the old country under the Duce.

Love is a wonderful mystery, so perhaps it were a mistake even to try to understand the affection for Italy of which Mr. Capaci speaks. But he has opened the discussion and thus invites the observation that Italy wasn't very kind to her people who emigrated to the United States by thousands to escape hunger, oppression and ignorance. And Mr. Capaci presumably has never seen Italy except, perhaps, as a tourist. Why then, this "affection" for Italy? Did Italy give his immigrant parents or grandparents a break?

They Got A Chance I do not agree that everyone in the United States has "a second love." That principle has been generally disastrous in domestic relations, and it will be equally embarrassing in civic relation. Neither Mussolini nor his boss, Adolf Hitler, would permit anyone claiming Italian or German citizenship to profess and serve a "second love" for the United States.

As to Italy's contribution to this country, I have always been skeptical. I claim that it was an even trade and that the United States owes nothing to Italy, Germany, France, Ireland, Britain or any other nation. Italy got rid of a lot of excess people, and the United States gave these immigrants a chance in life. Over the years Italy has received back millions of dollars in remittances from these immigrants, and if we received music and culture from Italy we also received some contagious diseases, and Italy, in return, has received some contributions from this young nation, which has a fair record of achievement herself.

So there we stand. Mr. Capaci says Italy is his "second love," and in a manner of speaking, the millions may vilify the wife, who mustn't even talk back to the mistress. And when Americans who have no "second love" resent aspersions on their country by his Italy he says the quality of his citizenship is impugned. That may be so, but if anyone has impugned it he has.

You can't two-time Columbia. She is very affectionate, but she will not stand for any lally-gagging.

Water Diet Urged.

Water was urged for diet purposes at a rice economy meeting of women leaders in Tokyo. The champion of this method said that folks should fill up on water before starting a meal so as to give the stuffed feeling of having had a sumptuous repast. The shortage of rice was ascribed to lack of manpower and the maldistribution of labor.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

MIRRORING THE PEOPLE The late Colonel Jack Spalding used to say that government mirrored the people themselves, their ideals and conceptions of government.

That is true. At least government mirrors a majority of those who vote and interest themselves in government. That is why the politicians themselves have a rather low opinion of those who are willing to play the politicians' game. That is why they are cynical about those who always late and futile wrath of the organizations which come shouting for good government but who themselves dodge the duties of citizenship.

It is just possible we are about to see a great revival in government and participation in government by the people.

We can use it. For 20 years now we have spawned, with few exceptions, a breed of politician whose idea of statesmanship and government has been to outpromise his rival. We have seen appeals to the worst passions and instincts of the people. The man who could promise the most got the most votes.

There has been a growing restlessness. State and city machines in Louisiana and in the east have broken or been broken. That restlessness may, in the national campaign, be fused into a direct interest in government and the issues which will decide our future.

A PLAN FOR AMERICA Anyone who reads about politics and the history of politics in our country knows that in the beginning issues were made crystal clear.

On one side were the Federalists, led by the brilliant Alexander Hamilton. Opposing them was the great mind and character of Thomas Jefferson. The Jeffersonians won after a struggle in which every citizen in this country, a mere 10,000,000 then, knew and understood the issues.

The nation grew. New peoples came. New problems of economy and government presented themselves. Jefferson wanted an agrarian nation with the workshops left in Europe. Before he left office he was to see the beginnings of industrialism.

The parties faded in influence. There were no national leaders. There were sectional leaders of brilliance and fire. States' rights, the economic warfare based on slavery, the agrarian south vs. the industrial north, all these served to bring on the War Between the States.

One leader arose. Abraham Lincoln, by his great debates with Douglas, was able to present the issues clearly enough to make the people understand and send him to the White House. And, what is more, support him for four years of a bitter and often nearly lost war.

There followed the long reign of the Republican party; the growth of special interests and privileges for the few. There followed the almost unbelievable industrial expansion.

By the time William Jennings Bryan made his cross of gold speech the factors which disturb us today were making themselves felt. Unemployment, problems of the depression, the growing discontent of the "forgotten man" with the Republican philosophy of government—all these came before Theodore Roosevelt. He was the trust buster. He made a desperate effort to salvage his party. It was dying of dry rot.

These issues were never settled. The World War came. We got into it. We tried to get back to normalcy with Harding. We kept cool with Coolidge and we waited for prosperity to come from around the corner with Hoover. Dry rot and a system of tariffs, loans to Europe to buy our goods, all of it caught up with us in a world crash.

Franklin D. Roosevelt came along. He struck out boldly. Charges the New Deal philosophy is some sort of Communism or Fascism is foolish. It exploded the dry rot of the old philosophy which had ruled since the War Between the States, making of the south and west colonies, building up the industrial and political power of the east.

A THING OF THE SPIRIT In Europe, within the democracies, there was inertia and stagnation. There was scandal and corruption in high places. Democracy there was dying. Hitler did not destroy it. It was dead or nearly so when he struck.

Now, we see, here in this country, what has happened. When men come to believe they do not have to work for security and look to the state for a living; when organized business or labor believes it can get what it wants in Washington if it knows the ropes there and has "influence" in the right places; when no one really gives a damn about government and does not rise in wrath and indignation; when there is no understanding of problems or interest in them—then democracy is dead.

We saw it die in European countries from those causes. The people of the United States seem to be aroused. They have two thinking, hard-hitting leaders in Roosevelt and Willkie. We may have the issues as sharply drawn as they were when Jefferson and Hamilton were the leaders; as when Lincoln and Douglas debated.

This may be the saving of democracy. Democracy is not laws, not elections, not voting, not a constitution or by-laws.

Democracy is a thing of the spirit, growing out of the minds and consciences of men and women who believe in its ideals and its spirit.

The outlook is encouraging. The finest thing we can have is a great political campaign with the issues discussed so all may see them and their import.

If so, then we shall save ourselves.

The Crowd Always Moves Away When The Performer Passes The Hat

By ROBERT QUILLLEN.

The dinosaur is gone, and only his bones are found in museums. He was unable to adjust himself to changing conditions.

And now the same natural law which doomed the dinosaur will as certainly bring an end to our free democratic system of life and government unless we are smart enough to change with changing conditions—and do it quickly.

For the last few weeks we have been absorbed in watching a fearful game, and in that short time we have changed from a nation of detached and peaceful isolationists to a nation of alarmed partisans, determined to arm to the utmost against an immediate and deadly danger.

But what have we actually done? What have we accomplished—we, the champions of speed and quantity production and go-getting efficiency?

We have sat in the grandstand or the bleachers and watched the game, cheering one side and cursing the other. Our leaders have made speeches and defied the world's greatest powers and appropriated billions for armament. And we have applauded every move, for it pleased our emotions and did not affect our lives or our pocketbooks.

But a few have felt the effect of war preparations and have cried in astonishment: "Why, this is going to hurt! We're not going to stand for it!"

Recent headlines tell us of vital production delayed because of wage disputes; or work held up because of a dispute over profits; of a great order refused because of a disagreement about taxes; of all-important production not yet started because we must have competitive bids; of contracts not yet awarded because of disagreements; of life-and-death matters not yet attended to because of politics.

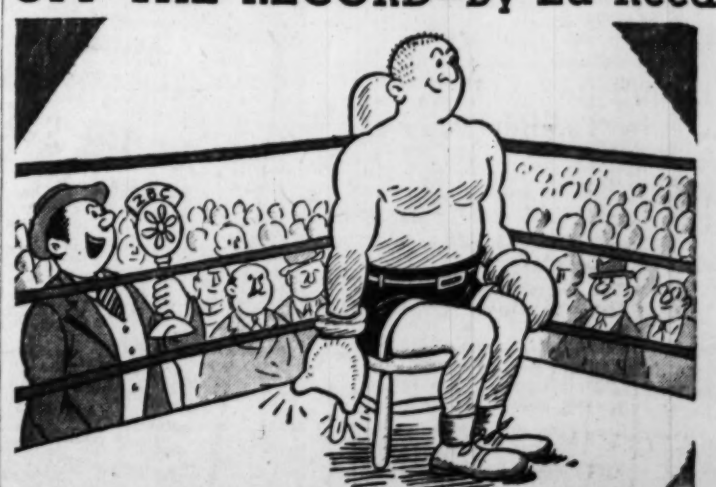

Meanwhile the precious days and weeks slip by, bringing us ever closer to the test, and we are no better prepared to meet it than we were a year ago.

Of course such a gigantic task cannot be finished in a few weeks or months. But we can make a start by giving one man the power to co-ordinate all defense work—as we did in the last war, and eventually must do this time.

We can recognize the fact that we must be ready to sacrifice profits, leisure, ease, political advance, personal advancement and everything else that stands in the way of our national effort.

If not—if we intend to copy England's follies—we might as well give up now and let Hitler have it.

Around Georgia

Something new—to me, for I'm no farmer—is an advertisement in F. O. Miller's Pembroke Journal. The advertiser owns a tractor and double-disk plow outfit and he announces his prices, per acre, for plowing anybody's farm. The rate varies according to the number of stumps on the land. It runs from 75 cents per acre, which looks cheap to a chap who'd shudder at trying to steer a plow. Or plow a steer.

One of those helps-to-better-English departments advises that one should not say, "I got a raise in salary," but, "My salary was raised." Lot of wasted newspaper space! The phrase is hardly likely to come up in conversation.

Down in Augusta, according to the Chronicle's society editor, moving day is July 1. In which Augusta is two months ahead of this metropolis.

Henry T. McIntosh, in the Albany Herald, views with apparent sorrow the change in uniforms of local military companies.

He recalls the old days when the Albany Guards paraded in "heavily padded coats of Confederate gray with three rows of brass buttons down the front, gloriously striped trousers, and atop each perspiring head a 16-inch high shako made of white-rabbit fur and guaranteed, on a hot day, to generate inside a temperature of 120 degrees in the sun. A militiaman could sweat off five pounds in a couple of hours."

Those, indeed, were the days when our patriots gave their life's sweat for their country. At least, a couple of days a year.

I lift this one from the American Times-Recorder, which picked it up from somewhere:

Lugubrious item from a California newspaper: "Bill Jarret has returned from working on the graveyard shift of the Corps Mining Company in Coffin Mine, located in Dead Man's Canyon in Funeral Range at the edge of Death Valley. He leaves next week for a prospecting trip to Devil's Playground in Hell's Half Acre."

But we never could get enough conversation out of a hay fever sufferer between sneezes to discover whether he was super-mind or a moron.

Easy Job

My attention has been called to the fact that at the recent Republican convention only one ballot was required to name the nominee for vice president—whose name we cannot, at this moment, recall. He has a great advantage over the head of the ticket. He can go on attending to his job, whatever that is, and not be bothered until he reads the papers the morning after election day. If he is still interested.

If two ounces of delicious, delectable, chilled cucumber makes him dream that the devil with a crimson tail is riding a straddle of his neck across the British channel with two fleets of smoking battleships below him, what would a two-pound specimen do?

Text of Dr. Truett's Sermon on 'Faithfulness'

The Constitution presents herein the text of Dr. George W. Truett's sermon, "The Reward for Faithfulness," which was delivered yesterday morning at the Druid Hills Baptist church. This is the concluding sermon in the week's series of meetings. After some personal remarks about the way the Atlanta Baptists had received him and his wife, Dr. Truett said:

I would have us think together this morning on the theme—the homely but vital theme—"The Rewards for Faithfulness."

The theme is suggested for us by this quaint promise given in the 30th chapter of I Samuel, "but his part is that goes down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff; they shall part alike." Quaint as is the promise, the lessons it suggests are exceedingly cheering and instructive.

It behooves us all to make much of the promises of God. They stand out in the Bible like stars in the sky, and every promise has a deep significance, the meaning of which we ought to seek to apply to our own lives. One does not know how to pray as he ought, if he does not first know the promises and come to God with them, saying: "Thou has said, thus and so; here is Thy promise; I plead it; I rely upon it." Indeed, our Lord bids us to fill our mouths with just such arguments, and come before Him in prayer.

TELLS OF TRIAL SUFFERED BY DAVID

Our text brings a picture before us, remarkably vivid and revealing. Let us get the outlines of the old story again for a moment, before we seek to deduce some lessons from it. David and his men were away at the battlefield, defending their country against hostile invaders. While they were away part of their foes came in at the rear and laid their city of Ziklag in ashes; and then carried away the women and children, and daughters of the absent soldiers who were at the front, defending their country. David and his men returned, of course, with high hopes and fast-beating hearts, for when a man is away from home and the time comes when he can go home, no method of conveyance can go fast enough to meet his desire. The true man turns home as he turns to no other place.

So, these men turned homeward, and, lo, when they got home they had no home. Their wives and children were carried away by their foes, and mayhap were suffering, that moment, atrocities too terrible to be told in words. The men were overwhelmed.

The Scriptures tell us that they "lifted up their voices and wept until they had no more power to weep." They were utterly overborne. And then a strange thing happened. They looked for a scapegoat! That is one of the perils of suffering; men look for a scapegoat. You have known men in their homes, when disappointment came, to ground around for days, when the wives and children were no more to blame for the disappointment than a newborn babe. You have to watch when the blow comes, or you are censorious, you are irritable, you are uncharitable, you are unreasonable. These men here looked for a scapegoat, and they actually proposed to make David, their gallant, chivalrous, unselfish leader, the scapegoat! They proposed to stone him. Poor human nature! What pranks it plays! What revelations we have of its thoughtlessness and ingratitude and weakness!

"But David encouraged himself in the Lord his God." Then David sought divine guidance, and was directed to go on a quest for the recovery of their loved ones. He chose 600 men to accompany him. As they went on their quest, 600 of them, they came to the brook called Besor, and 200 of the men were so faint they could not cross over the brook. There was something about it that made the passage impossible, maybe the steepness of its banks or the swiftness of its waters. Or it may have been their physical faintness and weakness which made it impossible for them to get over.

TELLS OF VICTORY OVER FOES.

"Very well," said David, "you 200 men stay here and mind the baggage, and the others of us who are stronger will go on." They went on and made a great recovery. All their loved ones were recovered; all the spoil that had been carried out of David's country was recaptured, and much more besides, from the enemies' country. David and his 400 men came back, and then it was that this statute was fashioned. In that hour when David came back to the brook Besor, and saw the 200 men and greeted them and was greeted by them, which greeting called forth a protest from some selfish men who went with him to the battle, David then fashioned this statute for his people: "As his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff, they shall part alike." In that quaint, age-old incident, some lessons emerge of large importance for us.

And first, not all in David's army were equally strong. Even so, not all in Christ's army are equally strong. Some are endowed with much strength; some are weak with pitiful weakness. Some have strength of mind, while others are quite limited in their mental training and capacity. Some have strength social, some have strength financial, while others have little or almost none at all. Not all in David's army were equally strong. The same truth applies to the followers of Christ.

The explanation of the weakness of David's men is written large in the old story itself. For one thing, they were overwrought in body. Their physical strength was exhausted from prolonged endurance and strain. It behooves us all to remember that these bodies of ours have their limitations. The body is the citadel of the life. The body can bear only so much. There are limitations upon these physical bodies, and all of us want to remember that the body is a mighty instrument. The body is to be shielded, to be guarded, to be conserved. The body is an invaluable instrument in the warfare that we are called to wage in this world.

RECALLS DEEDS OF ELIJAH

Hark back to the case of Elijah on Mount Carmel. We feel almost like worshipping him as he walked those mountains, one lone man, and hurled his withering sarcasm at hundreds of false prophets. They made their altar, and laid on it their offering to Baal, and long and late they called on Baal to hear and answer them. Elijah laughed at them, taunted them. "Cry louder," he said, "maybe your god is asleep; maybe he is on a journey; maybe he is eating his dinner; cry louder to him." And when the men had worked themselves into a frenzy, and of course received no answer from Baal, then Elijah built his altar, and put on his offering, and called on the Lord his God, the God of his fathers, that he would vindicate His name and His honor.

And there came down the consuming fire from heaven and God graciously accepted the offering which Elijah offered. Yet almost as if he whistled, Elijah as he towers on those mountains that fateful day, for he seems like a demigod as he walks those mountains. But the very next day, with his nerves all weary and discordant, the very next day, the tale of that wicked woman, Jezebel, sent him running clear out of the country!

He went a whole day's journey into the wilderness. And the next picture we have of him, he is down on his face, whimpering like an utterly defeated child, as if he was for the time being, praying to God to let him die, saying: "I am the only man you have left, and I cannot go on like this; let me die."

And God rested him, and comforted him, and gave him something to eat, and put him to bed, like a mother puts to bed a nervous, feverish child. And again, He fed him and rested him, and got him on his feet, and then said to him: "I have 7,000 men in these mountains who have never bowed the knee to Baal."

There he is—the same man, now up, now down. Make allowance for people when they are tired. Make allowance for people who are overwrought. Oh, make allowance! Make allowance! There are limitations to these bodies. Remember these limitations. Just so, the bodies of these men with David were overwrought.

SAYS PERPLEXITY IS DISTURBING THING

Furthermore, there was a worse thing than weariness in the case of these men with David—they were cut to shreds with perplexity. When a man does his duty and walks right into a lion's den and he is not likely to be sorely bothered about it. When a man does his duty, and is thrown into a fiery furnace as a result of it, he cannot but be troubled over it. When a man does his duty and in the wake of it there come tribulations of every kind, he is likely to be thoroughly bewildered by it. These men with David were terribly overborne, both in body and in spirit. They had been away defending their country against hostile invaders. They had been doing their duty. They had been valiant for home and for native land. And lo, when they came home their houses were in ashes, and their loved ones had been carried away by their foes! It is not to be wondered at that the mind of David was sorely perplexed.

What did David do in the midst of all his perplexities? Note carefully the Bible answer: "But David encouraged himself in the Lord his God." Isn't that a glorious thing to do? "But David encouraged himself in the Lord his God." Have you learned when you are depleted and down to cast yourself utterly upon the Lord? Have you learned that glorious art? Learn it! Pay the price to learn

COUNSEL WITH GOD URGED FOR TROUBLE

When the day of trouble comes, and the sky is dark, and the storms break pitilessly upon our heads, let us be sure to turn to the Lord. "But David encouraged himself in the Lord his God."

After his sorrowful experience, David consulted the Lord, and was directed by Him to follow after the men who had so grieved David and his men, and in such quest, the Lord assured David of complete triumph. Then David went on the great quest with 600 men, but 200 of them could not cross the brook, Besor, as has been explained. The 400 went on and made a great recovery, a complete recapture of all their loved ones, and also of a great spoil in addition. And they came back with joyful and exultant hearts.

Then David got back to the brook, the 200 men who could not cross it saluted David, and he in turn saluted them. And then a dark scene occurred with some of those 400 men. The Bible speaks of them as "men of Belial," or, selfish, self-centered men. Their theory of life was: "We will take care of number one, and the Devil take the rest." That was their wretched theory of life. They said in effect: "All this rich spoil and large reward that we have captured in the enemy's country, we are going to divide among ourselves, but these 200 babies, these misfits, these ne'er-do-wells, these weaklings, they get none of it. Only let them have their wives and children, and be quickly out of our sight!"

Generous and noble was David's reply. He reminded the 400 men that they victoriously given them was all of God's mercy. When will men learn the truth of this question in the Bible: "What hast thou, that thou hast not received?" When will men learn the truth as stated by Moses: "Remember, it is the Lord thy God who giveth thee the power to get wealth." When will men learn that all blessings of every kind are directly from the hand of God?

David further generously insisted that the 200 men who tried to get over the brook could not, were just as brave, just as patriotic, just as true, as the stronger 400 who did cross the brook. The 200 did the best they could. That is all that God asks of anybody. David insisted that the 200 who did the best they could were going to get exactly the same reward that the 400 got. "As his part is that goeth down to the battle, so shall his part be that tarrieth by the stuff; they shall part alike." And so the reward was apportioned that day, its suggested lesson abiding for our permanent instruction.

SAYS PROSPERITY IS DIVINE GIFT

Here is a very revealing truth that stands out in the quaint old story. It is that prosperity not only tests men, but it also reveals them. If men today imagine, like these men of Belial, that they are prosperous, they are not, they are only men who are riding for a deep ditch just ahead. Prosperity not only tests men, but it also reveals them. If prosperity makes men more selfish, makes them more proud, makes them more self-sufficient, then such prosperity is an unmitigated curse, and it will drag them down into disaster.

Men should understand that all true prosperity is given from God, and that it carries with it the inexorable obligation to translate this prosperity, whatever its form, into worthy, helpful service for a needy world. What is prosperity for? There can be but one correct answer to such question: All power is under inexorable bonds to serve humanity, in harmony with the will of God.

And now, there emerges from this story one pre-eminent lesson which we hope to get today. What is it? It is the statement of a glorious principle which runs all through the Kingdom of God. What is that principle? The principle is that all of Christ's soldiers, great and small, rich and poor, clever and ordinary, shall share alike in the reward at the last, provided they are equally faithful at their posts of service. That is a principle which runs all through God's Word.

HIGHEST REWARD HELD AVAILABLE FOR ALL

This Scripture that we are studying today teaches that the little, obscure, inconspicuous, unknown Christian, faithful at his or her post, shall share equally with Spurgeon, or Livingstone, or Paul, provided that such Christian is equally faithful with those mighty men in service. Now, does not that principle glorify life? Well may the poet sing: "A servant with this clause makes drudgery divine." There are no great measures, and watches, and understandings, and keeps all our tears in his own bottle, and takes cognizance of our every deed and thought and desire.

The story is told that when D. L. Moody's mother was buried yonder in Northfield, people came from various sections of the United States to pay honor there beside the bier of that noble woman. When different speakers had paid their generous tributes to the noble mother, the honored son rose at last and said: "If I can, I want to say a word." And looking down into the placid face of the sainted mother, Moody said: "Oh, Mother, you have done more for me than everybody else in the world, you believed in me when I was a wild boy, you followed me, and prayed for me, and loved me. Mother, I owe more to you than I owe to everybody else in the world." Moody moved two continents a little nearer to God and heaven, in the years recently gone, by his faithful testimony for Christ. But when the time comes to reward the noble son, the dear old mother shall share equally in reward with her son.

Let me briefly conclude by saying that just one thing in life is supremely matters. What is it? It is that faithfulness shall be magnified always and everywhere. Through summer's heat and winter's cold, faithfulness is to be magnified in the home, in the church, in the state, faithfulness in every realm of the whole social order. That is all that supremely matters. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Note carefully the words. It does not say: "Faithful unto death," but, "Faithful unto death," that is, faithful to dying point. Die before you would be unfaithful! Die before you would be false!

TELLS EXPERIENCE FROM OWN LIFE

You will allow me to be quite personal in this closing word, giving you if I may one of the most revealing experiences that has ever come to my own life. Yonder in my boyhood community in North Carolina was a neighbor boy, just my age. Often we sat together and talked, building our air castles, just as every boy should do. Jim dreamed of the day when he would be a great businessman, even as I dreamed of the day when I would be a lawyer. The years sped swiftly by, and Jim, the only boy in a large family with an invalid father, worked hard and faithfully on the little mountain valley farm to support the family, from early morning till the shades of evening, every day.

And then the time came when he had buried the father and the daughters were married and he went away to the west, a year or two before I went on to college. Some years ago I went to the city where Jim had made a great success as a businessman, and he had me in his lovely home there on the hill overlooking the great city. As we started to the train, following my engagement in his city, he said to me:

"George, you will let me tell you the sweetest word ever spoken to me in all my life. You remember how father was afflicted—how he was reduced to crutches, and how he had to sit there day after day on the little porch through those long years, unable to do anything about the farm."

"One day when the farm work was unusually heavy, I said to father as I left early in the morning to go to one of the distant valleys to plow for the day, 'If you feel at all able to do so, would you feed the stock this afternoon late? I shall likely be kept till dark in that valley.' Yes, son," he said, "I'll hobble out to the barn and feed for you."

"It was after dark, sure enough," said Jim, "when I got home that night, and I put the team up and went into the house for my supper. And then I went to the little porch for a visit with my father. Presently I said, 'father, did you get out there to feed the pigs this afternoon?' He waited for a moment, and then he said, 'Son, you will forgive me, I know, but I seem to have forgot it. I'm so sorry, son.'"

"I reassured him, and ran out to the barn, but as I passed through the gate he called me, in a faint voice, saying, 'Son, son, come back just a minute, son, hurried back to the porch, and he said, 'Son, come here, please, where I can put my hand on you. I don't seem to be able to see very well tonight.'"

"And I walked to the edge of the porch and stood by his old armchair. He put his trembling hand on my head, pushing back my cap, and said, 'O my faithful

APPRAISALS.

An event of such significance as the visit of Dr. George W. Truett reflects many interesting actions and reactions. My mail has been tremendous—letters from all over Georgia, and from many neighboring states—expressing gratitude for the surpassing service of The Constitution in publishing daily Dr. Truett's sermons in full text. A man bought a Constitution in Memphis, for example, just before taking a plane for Chicago. He scanned the headlines of the war zones, he said, "and then turned to Page 4 to find nearly the entire page devoted to a sermon. 'It arrested my attention, and I looked to see what in the world would justify a great newspaper taking all that space for a sermon. I was gripped by the opening sentence, and read the sermon through to the last word. It was the greatest sermon I ever read. I have mailed it to my partner in New York.'"

Former Governor John M. Slaton, speaking of Dr. Truett's address at the great intervic luncheon last Tuesday, said: "What that man had been a lawyer! is one of the great men of all times. That address Tuesday was God's message to our day a generation. Dr. Truett's emphasis upon the individual, upon personal faith in the Lord Jesus Christ upon religious liberty, upon freedom of speech, freedom of press, a free church in a free state, above all, his emphasis upon the Gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ as the one adequate available solvent for sin, is a message for our people and people today and every day."

Two fine Negro men shared the privilege of driving the car in which Dr. Truett rode during his stay in Atlanta. John Blount said to me the other night as he left the hotel: "This has been the happiest week in my life, getting to drive that great man of God, Dr. Truett, the other chauffeur, said to me as we rode, Ponce de Leon after Dr. Truett address at the civic luncheon. 'That man draws you closer to God.'"

A distinguished New York journalist, assigned to cover the Sal program on July 4, said to me: "Don't regard this day as a future in any sense. It didn't turn out as you planned, but I want to say I wouldn't have missed seeing this man for anything in the world."

A truck driver from a distant state, having parked his big truck at the state farmers' market across the street from the auditorium, saw the big crowd, walked over to see if we were having a boxing match on the night of July 4. He stood in entrance to the crowded building. Tired, he dropped down on his knees, and in that position listened for the full hour of the sermon. When it was ended, he turned to the near-by usher and said: "Thank God it was chance tonight to hear that sermon. I was so tired I could stand up, but he has given strength for all the days ahead."

Some day, some blessed day, may it be yours and mine to hear from the Father these words, "You have been faithful, my child, even unto death. Enter ye into the reward that awaits My ever-faithful child. Receive the crown of life." Be it ours this Lord's Day morning to say:

"Take my life and let it be, Consecrated, Lord, to Thee."

Bees Humble Brooklyn in Pair, 1-0, 2-1

Wyatt Drops 4-Hitter; Lee Walks in Big Cincinnati Run.

BOSTON, July 7.—(AP)—The cheers of approximately 1,000 Brooklyn fans who came here to root for their pennant-contending Dodgers couldn't offset the glistening pitching and airtight fielding of the Bees today as the Boston club swept a double-header, 1 to 0 and 2 to 1. Manuel Salvo went the route for the Bees in the opener, while Bill Posedel checked the Dodgers until the ninth inning of the nightcap, when Dick Coffman relieved him.

St. Louis Fans Warm Slowly To 'Star' Game

Capacity Crowd Predicted, However, for Major Classic Tuesday.

By JUDSON BAILEY.
ST. LOUIS, July 7.—(AP)—The bargain-loving fans of this metropolis on the Mississippi apparently awoke today to the significance of the all-star game that baseball is bringing to Sportsman's park Tuesday.

Previously the people who stay away in droves from the daily doings of the Browns and Cardinals had given their customary nonchalant treatment to the big midsummer spectacle, and a couple of thousand reserved seats as well as 5,000 bleacher seats still were available today.

RUSH PREDICTED.
President Sam Braden, of the Cardinals, who is host to the eighth annual charity contest, said, however, that he was confident the park would be filled to its 33,000 capacity Tuesday. He explained that box seats had never been placed on public sale, but had been taken by their regular holders and officials, and that a weekend rush for other seats would assuredly fill the arena.

There were less than 5,000 in the stands this afternoon for the Cardinals' doubleheader with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Fans speculated mildly about the makeup of the two star teams. The Cardinals' starting lineup but replacements for players who are withdrawing from the original squads.

The Chicago Cubs' Hank Leiber disclosed last night he did not intend to play. Bill Jurgens, of the New York Giants, already had been replaced by Eddie

Georgia Military Academy Begins 41st Year on September 9

Said To Have Finest Faculty In Its History

President Brewster Expresses His Ideas of Military Training.

Major W. R. Brewster, president of Georgia Military Academy, announces that G. M. A. will begin its forty-first year September 9 with the school equipment and buildings greatly improved and with the finest faculty in its history. A new football stadium will be completed by fall. The field has already been graded and work on the cinder track, which is to surround the field, will soon be under way. The field is a turtle-back and several tons of cotton mites have been worked into the soil to act as a fertilizer and to soften the ground. The field will be lighted for night use and stands will be built to accommodate several thousand.

Five new teachers have been added to the faculty, which will give the school a faculty of 25 men teachers, including five Phi Beta Kappa men, and seven who have masters' degrees from leading colleges. All are college graduates and each is a specialist in the subject he teaches. The increased faculty means the school will have a teacher for every 10 or 12 cadets.

This is the second time in the history of G. M. A. that the school has been called on to train boys to meet a national emergency. Events in the eastern hemisphere have convinced the American people that it is well for their boys to have military training with their academic work in order to prepare for what might come to this country later. G. M. A. will prepare boys for leadership in case of a national emergency. Regardless of whether a national emergency makes military training ing advisable, the G. M. A. president believes the training goes hand-in-hand with the academic work. Both are valuable in the development of men of strong bodies, strong minds, and strong character. A free, erect, graceful carriage of the body is an acquisition and a delight. It has value in commerce as well as in war. Military drill develops the whole man—head, chest, arms, and legs—proportionally. It teaches quickness and co-ordination of eye and ear, hand and foot, qualifies men to step and act in unison, teaches subordination and, best of all, it qualifies a boy to serve his country. Fifth Columns do not move in schools like G. M. A. because they stand 100 per cent Americanism.

GEORGIA MILITARY ACADEMY—Above is a fine view of the popular G. M. A., which will begin its 41st year September 9, with school equipment and buildings greatly improved, and the finest faculty in its history.

Dr. Frank Crane said: "I saw some recruits last summer at one of the cantonments being put through their drill. I am not a military man, but I wish that every human in the nation could have such discipline, till the self-discipline and the bitterness, and the gloom of the mulligrubs were cleaned out. "Discipline! That's what your poet with a stomach, and your idler with an excuse, and your child that's a nuisance, and your lackadaisical Miss, and your trifling young man, and all the other rots and spots of humanity need. There is no joy, no triumph of life, no health, no goodness of heart nor zest of spirit without discipline."

Military training is carried on at G. M. A. without interference with academic work. The school authorities realize that since 90 per cent of their graduates enter the leading colleges it must lay an academic foundation on which the student can build. With that in view every new student is required to take a course in "How and What to Study," and an extra instruction period is scheduled daily to help students who are behind in their work and who need individual attention. The academic standards or rating of the school are high.

Major Brewster invites parents who are interested in the selection of a private school for their sons to telephone the school office for information or visit the school.

J. R. Williams Moves Plant To Sixth Floor

Printing Concern Has New Location in Rhodes Annex.

Climbing higher and higher in the estimation of its many patrons—and still higher in the type of high-class printing it does—the J. R. Williams Printing Company, following the trends of its elevation, has sought now a higher location for its splendid plant, and is located on the sixth floor of the Rhodes building annex, on Marietta street.

For many years Jesse Williams has conducted his constantly growing printing business on the third floor of the annex, but as patronage has increased, and the demands became more urgent for high-type work, Mr. Williams had to seek larger quarters. Hence the move to the sixth floor, where he has double the room he had on the third floor.

In addition to the move, the well-known printer has added—and expects to keep on adding—improved machinery and methods to insure the type of high-class work his patrons demand. With artistic printers in his employ, and with skilled men on the finest of press work, together with trained salesmen, who can advise customers as to their best needs, Jesse Williams has grown to be among the leading printers of this city. His plant is equipped for all manner of printing—from the smallest card to the largest poster and artistic job. His plant knows color work—how to harmonize colors to get the best results on a job that the customers will be proud to display. There are presses and other equipment for publications of all kinds, bookwork, binding, and the like—in fact, everything needed that can be accomplished with type and ink, can be done at the Williams Printing Company, now sixth floor, Rhodes building annex.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.

With 12 years of practical experience in the automobile business, backed by a worth-while record of salesmanship, Jack Briscoe, well known by many scores of business and social friends, is building an extra good business for himself and associates as the head of J. L. Briscoe & Company.

Willys car distributors, recently moved from West Peachtree street, and now located at 381 Peachtree street, N. E., a door or two from Forrest avenue.

The Briscoe company opened its distributorship for all makes of Willys cars and trucks on last February 1. It has steadily maintained its very logical slogan, "Satisfaction to Our Customers," and the steady increase in business month after month is not only proof of the economy and dependability of the Willys line of motor vehicles, but conclusive proof that its customers are always pleased and satisfied.

The company is distributors in 94 counties in Georgia of the five-passenger models and two types of trucks designed by the Willys manufacturers. It shows these various lines in its plant and offices on Peachtree street, from where its retail sales and its wholesale distributorship is carried on.

The Willys cars carry with them a guarantee of 100,000 miles, or a three-year guarantee, and it is claimed by many drivers of Willys cars that they secure from 25 to 30 miles per gallon of gas.

In addition to the sales on Willys, the Briscoe company maintains a complete and modern service department, with Roy Gilstrap in charge, assisted by a corps of trained and competent mechanics.

Just in the rear of the Peachtree plant, and extending to Forrest avenue, in L shape, the Briscoe company displays a splendid line of used cars. These are of various makes and types—popular and well-known cars—but all have been thoroughly reconditioned before being placed on the lot for sale.

Jack Briscoe has surrounded himself with a fine personnel, his sales force known for their courtesy and fair dealing. In his sales force are such splendid fellows as Harold Huey, George Sheets, Grady King, Cosby (Dock) Barton, Thomas H. Russell and R. H. Bailey.

"The new Willys is the world's greatest combination of thrills with thrills—the sensation of the nation in smartness and low price. Experienced engineers have built into the Willys durability, roomy comfort, power and economy that gives you a new feeling of motorizing enjoyment and car satisfaction. In this car you have roomy comfort, no clumsy big car weight, nothing to contribute to high operating costs—not an inch of wasted wheel base, nor a cubic inch of wasted space."

Visualizing Plumbing Fixtures

Seckinger Sons Company Can Show Patrons Before They Buy.

In order that the buying public may visualize just how plumbing fixtures will appear when installed in its homes, the Seckinger Sons Company, located at 180 Forsyth street, S. W., has equipped its handsome new showrooms with a complete line of fixtures. This has been done because the concern realizes that buyers want to "see" rather than select from a catalogue, and here that opportunity is afforded them.

Ben J. Seckinger, president of the company, points out the reason very plainly why his concern has taken this progressive and satisfying step. "It enables the home owner to see and know how the fixtures will look in his home, thereby avoiding disappointment when the fixtures are installed," he said.

The company maintains a crew of competent and experienced plumbers and steam-fitters, whose work is always assured as among the best and most reliable to be obtained.

B. J. (Jimmie) Seckinger Jr., who has had 16 years' experience, in sales and service departments, is in charge of this department of the concern. R. P. (Mutt) Seckinger is in charge of outside construction, and his past six years' experience in this type of plumbing and heating installation is a guarantee of absolutely satisfactory work.

The company handles Standard and Crane plumbing fixtures, steel and cast-iron boilers, Crane heating equipment. It features work in the contracting trade as well as retail, and for the retail trade carries a complete line of plumbing and heating equipment and parts.

Western Group Ends Georgia Farming Tour

Declares Two Areas Have Mutual Agricultural Problems.

By ROBERT E. LEIGH.
Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
ATHENS, Ga., July 7.—The three-day farm tour of Georgia ended today for agricultural leaders from 13 western states, after the visitors had assured their Georgia hosts that the south need not fear the west as a potential competitor in agricultural products grown extensively here. "The south and west have mutual problems," observed C. C. Farrington, heading the western party as assistant director of that AAA region. "For instance, we are growing 70,000,000 pounds of Austrian winter peas in Oregon this year and practically all of these peas will be shipped in Dixie cotton bags."

S. E. Statham, chairman of the Georgia AAA committee and one of the chief hosts to the westerners, said Georgia farmers plan to plant between 15 and 16 million pounds of peas this year. Practically all of these will be shipped from Oregon under the grant-of-aid plan of the AAA.

Farrington said he was impressed with the use Mrs. Ola Aultman, of Warwick, has been making of Austrian peas as a soil-building crop. Mrs. Aultman told the western farm leader when the tour started at her 15,000-acre Worth county farm that Austrian peas had doubled the production of corn on some sections of her plantation.

"This year," Mrs. Aultman said, "I have ordered 22,000 pounds of Austrian winter peas through the AAA. I intend to use these in my efforts to rebuild 710 acres of wornout land."

Farrington summarized Georgia's major agricultural problems, as his party observed them the past three days, as follows: The state has the largest number of eroded acres in the country; about one-half the cultivatable acreage needed; inadequate housing facilities; a high per cent of tenants who move from year to year; and too many farms without cows, hogs and chickens.

The last day's trip routed the visitors from Macon to Athens, via Jones, Jasper, Morgan, Oconee and Clarke counties. The visitors were given a scientific approach to Georgia's soil erosion problem by J. R. Careck, engineer of the Southern Piedmont Experiment Station near Watkinsville, before the motorcade continued to Athens for a tour of the University of Georgia campus and farm. They departed for Washington and the national AAA conference on an afternoon train.

States represented in the tour, which started at Columbus last Friday and passed in Macon last night after "stops" at Albany, Tifton and other Georgia towns and numerous farms, were California, Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, Utah, Washington and Wyoming.

Peek Murder To Be Studied By Cobb Jury

Group To Revive Probe When It Convenes On July 15.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
MARIETTA, Ga., July 7.—Investigation into the two-year-old unsolved murder of Mr. and Mrs. J. Ed Peek, of Atlanta, will be revived here July 15 by a Cobb county grand jury, it was learned here today.

Thirty persons—12 farmers and 18 clerks, merchants and businessmen—have been summoned for jury duty. From this list 23 persons will be selected for service on the jury.

Meanwhile, Bill Chappell, 24-year-old son of Carroll County Commissioner Hamp Chappell, and five other persons are being held in connection with the case.

Chappell faces a blanket murder charge and is being held incommunicado in the jail here. Only members of his family and his attorney are permitted to talk to him.

While official word was lacking, it was rumored here that more arrests are expected before the case goes to the jury.

Bodies of the Peeks were found sprawled in a deep railroad cut three miles southeast of Austell, June 21, 1938.

Besides Chappell, others being held are Louis Turner and Jason Clark, convicts; John Holsombeck, 68-year-old inmate of the Carroll county almshouse; and Alvin Pitts, mill worker of Carrollton and a former convict in the Carroll camp, arrested two weeks ago as a material witness.

Charley Spence, warden of the Carroll county camp, is under bond of $300 as a material witness in the investigation.

Red Cross Needs $22,000 More

Needing $22,000, volunteer Red Cross workers today will begin a clean-up drive to send Atlanta's $100,000 war relief campaign "over the top," P. C. McDuffie, general chairman, said yesterday.

A canvass of every business firm in the city will be included in the drive, McDuffie said, as there are still several hundred concerns which have not given and whose employees have not contributed to the drive.

So far in the seven-week campaign, Atlanta has contributed a total of $77,428.47.

W. N. Woodbury Wins Chess Finals

W. N. Woodbury, former Atlanta now living in Birmingham, won the Southern Open Chess tournament for the third time at finals concluded here yesterday.

Stirring German March Helped Nazi Troops Conquer France

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
BERLIN, July 7.—(P)—Two "invisible divisions," as one officer put it to me, helped win Germany's war against France. They were the "Engel Lied" and the "Frankreich Lied." (England Song and France Song)—two stirring tunes composed for the western offensive.

The general in command of these invisible divisions was Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels, whose "army" further included daredevil cameramen, uniformed reporters whose feats often won them iron crosses; radio reporters who stood in the thick of a battle, and all modern technical devices for influencing public opinion.

As an example of minute attention to details let me repeat what my officer associate told me about the France Song.

The song writer and composer entrusted with the writing of this song," he said, "merely furnished the raw material. Thereafter seven of us, including Goebbels, took a hand. We went over every line of the stirring text exhorting our soldiers to march into France, adding or subtracting here and there, improving the language, then we went over the musical score."

One day I stood at a pontoon bridge in Antwerp. It was a hot day. The Nazi troops showed signs of wear, of forced marches, of lack of sleep. About five minutes later a radio truck took position beside the first pontoon and a snappy, jolly march blared forth. The effect was baffling, everybody relaxed, felt better, began whistling or singing.

The soldiers' good humor also was kept alive by certain weekly broadcasts in which family news was featured. Thus Private Fritz Mueller heard on the radio that his wife had given birth to a strapping son. Heinrich Schultz learned that his aged parents celebrated their golden wedding in perfect health.

Wimpey To Install Officers of Legion

Hoyt Wimpey, of Thomasville, commander-elect of Georgia Legionnaires, will install officers of Lyle-Brewster Post, No. 50, American Legion, at 8:30 o'clock Thursday night at the post home, 900 West Harvard avenue, College Park.

Auxiliary officers will be installed by Mrs. J. P. Kelly, state president of the auxiliary.

Post officers are: J. C. Hambrick, commander; H. R. Harris, senior vice commander; L. C. Perdue, junior vice commander; R. Irvin Wright, adjutant; Alton B. Sims, finance officer; Harold Youmans, chaplain; W. W. Harrison, sergeant-at-arms.

Auxiliary officers are: Mrs. H. C. Stakely, president; Mrs. J. C. Hambrick, first vice president; Mrs. Roy Stone, second vice president; Mrs. G. W. Harris, treasurer; Mrs. Joe Morris, secretary; Mrs. Jennie Mae Moore, sergeant-at-arms; Mrs. H. C. Hutcherson, chaplain; Mrs. Sam Rocker, historian.

Deputies in Cobb Injured by Crash

MARIETTA, Ga., July 7.—Deputies Emmett Marler and Dewey Gable received painful injuries in a collision early today involving their own car and a second automobile, two miles north of Marietta.

Officers said the deputies' car was hit by a machine driven by Allison Overcash, who told investigators he was forced to swerve in the direction of the officers' automobile to avoid hitting pedestrians walking along the highway.

Hospital attaches reported Deputy Marler will remain in the Marietta hospital for several days. He suffered two fractured ribs, head lacerations and painful bruises.

Gable was allowed to go home after receiving attention for an injured leg. Witnesses said the impact of the crash caused a young girl to faint at the roadside.

WPA Murals At Air Field Branded 'Red'

Wright Brothers Shown in Russian Peasant Dress, Protests Say.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(P)—Four WPA murals at Floyd Bennett airport were termed communist propaganda in protests filed with the city today and Lieutenant Colonel Brehon B. Somervell, WPA administrator, said an investigation would be started immediately.

The women's international aeronautic Association, the Flatbush Chamber of Commerce and Floyd Bennett Post of the American Legion declare that:

The Wright brothers at Kitty Hawk are shown in Russian peasant costumes; Prominently displayed is a red statue of Joseph Stalin with a fallen aviator lying at his feet; A painting of the United States naval reserve hangar on the airport grounds has substituted a red star, symbol of the Soviet army, for the correct white star insignia; And that among paintings of planes is one showing the Soviet plane which flew from Moscow to California several years ago.

The murals, which required three or four years for their creation, must be approved by the Municipal Art Commission. They were a WPA federal arts project.

SURGICAL INSTRUMENTS—Showing one side of the plant of the Everhart Surgical Supply Company at 493 Peachtree street. Supplies are furnished to doctors over several southern states.

Everhart Surgical Supply Co. Giving Service for 24 Years

With a record of 24 years of success in serving the medical profession with surgical instruments and other necessary equipment for their profession throughout several southern states, the Everhart Surgical Supply Company, located at 493 Peachtree street, is still meeting and continuing the excellent service which has given it to so much success among the doctors of the south.

The business was started many years ago by Laurence Everhart, who is president of the company, and who continues to give to his close personal attention. For many years Mr. Everhart had been registrar of the Atlanta Medical College (now Emory University School of Medicine), in which capacity he made scores and scores of friends with the outgoing classes from that institution, and through his genial friendship for the new and young doctors, Mr. Everhart enjoyed a fine patronage from the beginning of his company. He still enjoys the close friendship of hundreds of these professional men, and is happy to count them among his many patrons.

Carl M. Camp is vice president of the company, having bought an interest in the business on January 1 this year. Mr. Camp has spent many years in the surgical business, being formerly connected with the Crown Surgical Company of New York city. Like Mr. Everhart, he has many friends among the doctors of the entire south.

This firm travels four men, one of whom is resident in Orlando, Fla., and travels continuously, making every Florida town every 60 days. It covers Georgia, Florida and South Carolina and sells the highest grade hospitals and doctors in each town, and has always given complete satisfaction to practically all of them.

The company is Georgia agent for the Hamilton Manufacturing Company of Wisconsin, manufacturers of high grade walnut furniture for doctors' offices. It is also agent for the Eastman Kodak Company and has a large trade on X-ray films in the south. One of its outstanding lines is the National Drug Company products, manufacturers of biologicals, ampoules, etc. It is southern distributor and ships to doctors and hospitals from Texas to Virginia.

"While we have a splendid stock of surgical instruments, once in a while we get a rush order for some special instrument to be had only in New York, and use the telegraph or air mail, getting the doctor what he wants the next morning after order is received from him," says Mr. Everhart.

The company is headquarters for the rental of invalid chairs, baby scales, hospital beds, etc., and carries a full line of sick room supplies such as crutches, enamelware, rubber sheeting etc.

"Our customers quite frequently compliment us on our fast delivery system, as we have three cars at our disposal at all times," continued Mr. Everhart. "We have only one hard and fast rule for our business, and that is the Golden Rule."

The rules of the contest are simple, and anyone is eligible. Elsewhere on this page is a coupon worth 25 votes. Contestants must get as many votes as possible, send in all their coupons together with a letter of not more than 100 words on the subject, "What I Consider a 'Heavenly' Vacation."

The contest is being held in conjunction with the showing of "All This, and Heaven Too," starring Bette Davis and Charles Boyer, at the Fox, starting Friday.

When you have compiled all the votes you can, write your letter on what you consider a "heavenly" vacation. Who knows but what you will be one of the lucky ones to get that vacation with the help of one of the cash prizes?

Don't lose any time. Now is the time to start piling up your votes. And remember, only a few hundred votes may be enough to win. Whatever you get, you still have a chance to win one of the prizes because your letter on "What I Consider a 'Heavenly' Vacation" may be the deciding factor.

British Actors Not Affected by Call of Nation

Richard Green Only Star Here Within Age Limits Set.

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—(P)—A British call for film actors between the ages of 18 and 31 to return soon to England affects apparently but one important Hollywood figure, dark-haired, dimpled Richard Green.

All other major British actors, such as Cary Grant, Ray Milland, Brian Ahearne and David Niven, are past the age of 31. Niven has been in England for several months, however.

Grant and Milland have taken out first citizenship papers, Grant explaining recently that he was deferring further action "because I don't want people in England to think I'm deserting at a time like this, yet I still want to become an American citizen."

Actor Basil Rathbone, himself well past the maximum age, said his 23-year-old son, Sean, had been waiting at Chicago for several weeks, since offering his services to Canada, and may have gone to Toronto in the light of recent developments.

Young Greene, one of the busiest actors in the Twentieth Century-Fox lot, recently appeared in "Little Old New York" and "I Married an Adventuress," and after a month's vacation was to have started work with Sonja Henie and Henry Fonda in a skiing picture.

British actors in this country between the ages of 18 and 31 were directed to day through Lord Lothian, British ambassador at Washington, to return to England "as soon as they can make necessary arrangements."

Broadway actors not affected.

NEW YORK, July 7.—(P)—No well-known British actors now on Broadway were affected by the order issued through the British embassy directing those between the ages of 18 and 31 to return to England "as soon as they can make necessary arrangements."

Laurence Olivier, 33, is over the age mentioned, as are other British stars now in New York.

Radio Attacks Cause Turkey Grave Concern

Broadcasts Feared Build-Up for Move on Dardanelles.

ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 7.—(P)—German, Russian and Italian press and radio attacks on Turkey caused grave concern today in Turkish government circles where the criticism was viewed as a possible build-up for a move by Soviet Russia toward the Dardanelles.

Many diplomats expressed the belief that Russian demands for concessions in the heavily fortified straits might come to a head this week.

The criticism of Turkey came from commentators who said there was evidence that Turkey plotted with the Allies for air attacks on Caucasus oil fields in Russia. The government flatly denied any part in such a plot.

Intensive military preparations were continued with additional manpower called to the colors, and foreign military observers estimating the number under arms at 800,000. The air force held maneuvers not far from the Bulgarian frontier.

Work is being rushed harvesting Turkey's exceptionally large wheat crop.

Meanwhile Soviet Russia poured additional armed divisions into Rumania's lost northern territories to strengthen motorized troops which completed the occupation of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina July 3, reports from Bucharest said.

Officially it was declared that "all is quiet" along the border, with Rumanian troops not involved in any incidents in the past few days.

'Judge Hardy and Son' Is Kept Today at Center

"Judge Hardy and Son," starring Lewis Stone and Mickey Rooney, continues today at the Center theater, to be followed tomorrow by "The Great Victor Herbert," with Walter Connolly and Mary Martin.

"Of Mice and Men" will play Wednesday and Thursday, while "Northwest Passage" is scheduled Friday and Saturday.

Fischer Will Speak

On Food Stamp Plan Philip J. Fischer, program organizer of the Surplus Marketing Administration, will speak on "Merchandising in Retail Food Stores Through the Use of the Food Stamp Plan" at the Kiwanis Club meeting at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow in the Ansley hotel.

The Kiwanis Club announced it will donate medals to outstanding trainees of the special business and professional men's C. M. T. C. course at Fort McPherson opening today and continuing through August 6.

Youths Reject Action Scoring Dictators' Rule

Congress Scorns Resolution Playing 'War,' 'Political' Power.

LAKE GENEVA, Wis., July 7.—(UP)—The sixth annual convention of the American Youth Congress late today overwhelmingly rejected a resolution expressing determination never to be led by "a political dictator as are Germany, Italy, Russia, Japan or Spain."

The convention, which last night went on record as condemning "the present drive against the civil liberties of the Communists," modified its attitude somewhat a few minutes later by adopting a resolution condemning dictatorships "whether Communist, Fascist, Nazi or otherwise." But delegates of the Young Communist League did not participate in the vote on the latter resolution.

"Because dictatorship means the loss of civil liberties, we are determined we never shall be led by a war dictator as are England and France, or a political dictator as are Germany, Italy, Japan or Franco Spain," the resolution said.

ANDY HARDY—Is in difficulties at the Center theater today in "Judge Hardy and Son."

Brady Offers Patients Two Practical Suggestions

By Dr. William Brady.

Ubiquitous and versatile are adjectives commonly applied to the pneumococcus. If germs could be assumed to have consciousness, the pneumococcus would be well adapted for a Jekyll-Hyde character. In its Dr. Jekyll state the pneumococcus is found in at least 20 per cent of healthy person's mouths—it is a normal inhabitant of the mouth. The great Pasteur found the germ in the saliva of a child "dead of hydrophobia" in 1880, and thought it was the "coccus of sputum septicemia." Surgeon General Sternberg, of the United States army medical corps, about the same time, inoculated rabbits with his own saliva, and isolated from the inoculated rabbits a micrococcus which he considered the cause of sputum septicemia. In 1884 a German physician, Albert Fraenkel, working with an Austrian pathologist, Anthony Weichselbaum, determined that Pasteur's and Sternberg's sputum septicemia germ was the germ most frequently found in the lung in pneumonia.

The pneumococcus is kin to the notorious streptococcus and indeed recent laboratory studies indicate that a comparatively innocuous strain of pneumococcus may be transmuted into virulent streptococcus by certain cultural conditions or by changed environment.

Whether the Dr. Jekyll pneumococcus commonly present in the mouths of healthy persons may become transmuted into the Mr. Hyde strain which causes coryza, sinusitis, pharyngitis, laryngitis, tonsillitis, quinsy, pneumonia, pleurisy, heart valve damage (endocarditis), sometimes appendicitis, empyema, meningitis, is not definitely known. It may well be that such transmutation may be favored by the presence in the mouth of neglected dental caries, chronic gingivitis, pyorrhea, and by conditions which interfere with normal ventilation and draining of sinuses or tonsils.

In a characteristic effort to lend dignity to the old fishwife fancy that exposure to cold, wet, draft or sudden change causes or predisposes to disease, some of the old-timers who consider themselves qualified to speak of the unique concept that under such circumstances a person catches the pneumonia or whatnot from himself—that is, his own pneumococci, always present in the saliva, suddenly turn vicious or virulent, and there the poor geek is!

There is still a vast amount of stuff and nonsense on the subject, but enough of that. I want to give you just two practical suggestions. First, there is good medical authority for the belief that boric acid is especially unfavorable to pneumococcus growth—boric acid mouthwash, boric acid nasal spray, boric acid eye drops, boric acid ear drops. Second, quinine seems to be the best pneumococidal remedy or at least the best home remedy one can use for acute illness of the nature of pneumonia, influenza, grip, coryza, bronchitis, sore throat, etc.—a prophylactic I suggest one grain of quinine sulphate three times a day. As a remedy, when you are coming down with an attack—two grains every four hours.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Wheat to Eat.
Because of missing teeth I boil plain wheat about 1 1/2 hours, then put it through food chopper as I use it as more than 50 per cent of my morning meal and noon meal. Having used it for years, I have excellent stomach and intestinal function. Physicians who examined me last week (65th birthday) said I haven't a defect. (W. J. G.)

Answer—What, did the doctor overlook your defective masticating machinery? If you have managed to keep so fit with that defect, think how much finer your condition, your vire, might be had you commissioned your dentist to install suitable dentures to carry on the important function of the missing teeth. Every tooth lost from the mouth and not replaced by a functionally efficient denture should be checked off as about two years, deducted from one's expectation of life. Even now it might be beneficial to you to study the booklet "Save Your Teeth"—for copy send 25c coin and stamped envelope bearing your address. Dentists who provide a stamped envelope bearing their address are welcome to the booklet with my compliments.

MY DAY: A Neighborhood Celebration

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK—There was a nice little ceremony at the library when the key was finally turned over to Mr. R. D. W. Connor, the architect of the United States. The President was gently reminded by him that the building now waited for his papers. The prompt answer was that 32 cases of books, papers and prints were already there, and more were on the way.

After the flag was raised in front of the library, we came over to my cottage and gradually all the people who are my closest neighbors, from grandparents to babies, began to gather. A little after 4:00 o'clock, the President drove up. He read the Declaration of Independence, leaving out only the part which has direct reference to our situation in 1776. Then he talked to us all for a few minutes on the historical happenings of the last few years and the situation in the world today.

Mr. Arthur Smith, aided by one of the small boys, pulled the flag to the top of the flagpole. The colored baritone, William Bowers, sang "America" and everybody joined in. Afterwards he sang one or two other songs, including "God Bless America." Everyone said goodbye to the President and went up to enjoy a few refreshments on the lawn and chat together for a little while before returning to their homes.

At about 6 o'clock the President came back again, and Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau with their daughter, Joan, and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon, and various members of our family gathered at the cottage for a picnic supper. The newspapermen, photographers, office force and other friends were all with us. The sun came out and made it quite warm and pleasant, but we were a little afraid that the ground would be damp so we served our food indoors. Bowers sang for us again, accompanied on the guitar by Vincent Catanese, who has his own orchestra on Staten Island. Catanese was really remarkable, for he was able to play almost any song that was suggested if someone just hummed the tune. Everyone enjoyed Bower's singing. I was sorry that a call from the secretary of state took the President back to the big house about 8 o'clock and made everybody else go back to work.

Naturally feeling today by the little ceremony with our neighbors around the flagpole, because it is so significant of what we stand for in this country. The President of the United States observing this Fourth of July with his neighbors in that close companionship which should exist between all of us in this Democratic nation, challenged the relationships in the totalitarian countries. If we talk to each other in honesty and simple faith, our light will shine forth to the world.

Dietrich Keeps 'Blue Angel' Role in Her Next Picture

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, July 7.—"I want a man with hair on his chest—for Marlene Dietrich—to make love to her in 'Seven Sinners,'" says Producer Joe Pasternak. Don't rush, boys. The missing link in the Dietrich assignment of seven leading men—six have already been signed—will in all probability be John Wayne.

"The picture starts directly 1 sign Wayne," Pasternak tells me, and begins enthusing about the picture, which, he says, "takes up where Marlene left off in 'The Blue Angel.'" She enacts a lady of doubtful virtue in the West Indies. She takes the males when they please her; drops them when she is bored. She will keep Mr. Wayne after some very torrid stuff has passed on the screen. And she will sing in lowly cafes. By the way, the title, "Seven Sinners," has nothing to do with the seven men in the picture. It's the name of a night club. Yeah, I was fooled, too.

July 4 was a good day for the release of the first of Warner's shorts to stimulate recruiting and interest in the various branches of the United States fighting services. The one released was "Service With the Colors," featuring William Lundigan, Henry O'Neill, John Liel, Robert Armstrong and William Orr. Most of these actors will appear also in the second of the series, "Passing in Review," which is about the marine service. There will be six shorts all told—and in technicolor.

Vivien Leigh's next picture will be made in Hollywood, and under the producership of Alexander Korda (Korda shares Vivien's contract with David Selznick). She will play another meanie role—married to one man and in love with another—a la "G. W. T. W." The picture is titled "Woman Hunt," from the novel, "Gone with the Wind." Production is planned for September, following which Vivien stars with Laurence Olivier in "Cyrano de Bergerac." And that reminds me—what has happened to the plan for the couple to return to England? They were supposed to have sailed early last month, but are still here. At about the time Miss Leigh is emoting in "Woman Hunt," Olivier will star for Warners in "Edgar Allan Poe." His leading lady will be Olivia de Havilland. The movie concerns Poe's early manhood only, to avoid the depressing later life of the poet-author. I'm told that the script, for which Edgar Allan Poe Jr., of Baltimore, acted as technical advisor, is in the grade A category.

Margaret Sullivan's picture career is booked "way ahead." So I guess she is postponing family acquisition plans for six months at least. After "Flotsam," in which Margaret stars with Frederic March for the new Loew-Lewin combination, she remains with the company for the lead in "Night Isie," filmization of the Clifford Odets' play.

I saw "The Fight for Life" the other night. This Pare Lorentz picture, sponsored by the United States government, is the most thrilling, stirring, pictorial document I've seen in years. The music and photography are used with a maximum of dramatic effect. More than two-thirds of the picture was "shot" in the Chicago maternity center and in tenement homes of expectant mothers. The picture stresses the fine work done by the maternity center. And yet I'm told that "The Fight for Life" has been banned by the censors of Chicago on the grounds that it is

Know a Lot Of Colorful Phrases

It ought to be a thrill to sit out a dance with the best-looking young man at the party. But so often a dash of cold water seems to descend on your head as you leave the crowd. You can't think what to say!

That wouldn't happen if you knew a lot of bright phrases, colorful combinations. From the very first second, you charm with your clever repartee, gay conversation.

To his "what bright eyes you have" you reply, "The better to see you with, my dear." And lightly you ripple on, speak of the "artful, witching moon," the "garden of enchantment" around you. You soon gain a reputation for social sophistication when you have phrases for every occasion right at the tip of your tongue.

You greet your hostess charmingly with "It was so sweet of you to ask me." To the man who's thanked you for a dance, you murmur, "I enjoyed it, too." On being introduced, you start a conversation rolling with "Isn't this music divine?" You tell the friend who's done you a favor, "I'll never forget your kindness."

And in your more weighty moments, what a help expressive word combinations can be. Giving a book review at your club, you speak of the author's "graphic descriptions," praise his "talent and originality." At a job interview, you impress your prospective employer when you say that you are "capable and experienced" and "keenly appreciative" of his interest.

Yes, you go over in a big way, with right words and phrases on the tip of your tongue. Our 40-page booklet, 1,500 USEFUL PHRASES, has phrases for many kinds of social and business occasions, gives hundreds of lively word combinations to dress up your speech, help make you a success.

From now on Jeffrey Lynn gets star-billing in his pictures. This is the result of audience reaction to "My Love Came Back" in which he is teamed with Olivia de Havilland. Good as Jeffrey is, however, the picture is stolen by Olivia. The funny thing here is that Olivia was terribly worried all during the making of the picture. She didn't like the story and was doubtful about Director Kurt Bernhardt. But Kurt knew more about Olivia than she did about him—or herself. He made her "let go," and the result is a picture that is a surprise hit. I'll make a bet that it brings in more profit than the studio's million-and-a-half biggie—"All This and Heaven, Too."

Strengthen Arches To Avoid A Lamé Girl Tells of Her Happiness

By Ida Jean Kain.

Gossip has it that one fine old gentleman with the courage of his convictions gets up at dawn to walk barefoot in the dew at New York's Central park. We've never gotten up early enough to check this, but the idea is not nearly as eccentric as it may sound.

Walking barefoot is an extremely effective way of strengthening the foot muscles. If you are so lucky as to spend some time at the beach, make a habit of walking barefoot in the sand—the effort of walking in the shifting sand is marvelous for the feet.

After talking with Rosa Munde, we are convinced that the serious effect of abused feet on health, looks and disposition is not generally appreciated. Miss Munde for years has been helping New York women to solve their figure problems, specializing in spinal curvature corrective exercise.

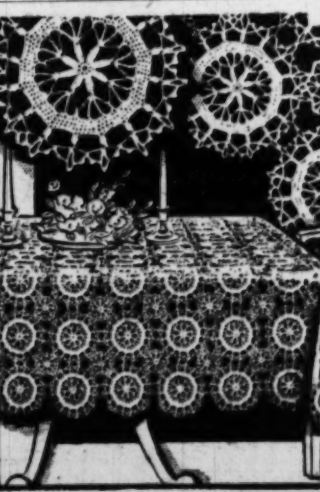

"Most people over 30," Miss Munde declares, "either have fallen arches or are on their way to having them. The average person seems to depend entirely on walking for exercise and then doesn't walk! The little walking women do is done in high heels—which further weakens the metatarsals. There is also a general tendency to take on weight as one grows older and foot trouble increases with the addition of pounds. Weight reduction is the first step in the correction of the foot trouble of the excessively overweight person."

But if your weight is within range of normal, Miss Munde suggests a dandy set of exercises patterned on those ballet movements and which give dancers such strong arches and nicely developed leg and thigh movements. And since Miss Munde promises that "when you start improving the feet, the legs also improve" you will find these exercises well worth your while.

1. Stand with the back against a heavy chair, hands on the chair back at the sides for support. Feet should be parallel, knees stiff, and the trunk should remain erect throughout. Kick alternate legs from the hips, bringing them up in front, and pointing the toes hard, turning them out to the side. Continue for eight counts with each leg. If this exercise is performed correctly, you will feel a strong pull on the muscles of the foot, leg, abdomen and hips.

3. One of the best foot exercises is very simple: Stand facing the chairback with both hands on it for support. Have feet parallel, heels on floor. Bend the knees slightly and spring into the air. As you do so, straighten the knees and point toes hard. Come down on floor again with knees slightly bent, heels on floor, ready for next spring. Keep it up! If your chair is not heavy enough to support you, turn it so that the seat is under a desk—or use a straight chair under the desk for that purpose.

New Flacon Is Ideal To Carry In Bag

By Lillian Mae.

There has just come to my attention a package I wish might have been brought out a few weeks earlier, because it would have been a grand suggestion for a graduation gift. However, there are showers, parties, etc., for which you will find it an ideal gift, and what's more, you will be sure to want one for yourself.

The whole thing is only slightly larger than an average lipstick, but it serves a dual purpose—and beautifully so. The bottom of this cylinder is a blue flacon containing that same perfume which I've recommended several times as being suitable for any one from the school girl to grandmother. It's not often that I run across an item—particularly a perfume—which I can recommend for such universal use, but this one is just sweet enough without being too sweet; just strong enough without being too strong and of such a delightful fragrance withal, that it is a universal favorite.

On the top there is a blue plastic container of the same shade as the flacon, and this screws off to reveal an ever-so-nice lipstick, which may be had in any one of five beautiful shades. The base of the lipstick is a white plastic band, separating the two blues. When the entire lipstick case, blue top and white base, are screwed off, the perfume flacon is open and ready for use. The whole, just the right size for carrying in the handbag, is topped with a gay tassel.

Imagine this handy little item carrying both lipstick and perfume, and so constructed that neither lipstick nor perfume can spill or soil your bag. It's quite an ingenious package, and the price is so low that it will amaze you. But when you hear the name of the manufacturer, you'll know that there's quality therein, in spite of the price.

Refills for the lipstick may be purchased, and of course the perfume flacon may be filled over and over again. Phone me for the name of this flacon-lipstick, and settle at once the problem of gifts for the summer. Write me if you do not live in Atlanta, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Double-Panels

By Lillian Mae.

You can wear light summery things and still look your slimmest—in a style with really good lines. In other words, in Pattern 4382, designed by Lillian Mae, this dress creates a tall-and-slim illusion with its two long front panels. The decorative yokes allow for nice bodice softness, yet keep your shoulder lines smooth and trim. Notice the neat pointed sleeves on the short puffed sleeves. You might highlight all the attractive details by having the panels, yokes and sleeves in gay color. Or add bow ends of dainty contrast—say white lace or eyelid embroidery. You'll just live in this pretty style during the heat wave!

Pattern 4382 is available in women's sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 3 1/2 yards 39-inch fabric.

"Don't I know how it hurts to be different when one is in the teen age? Yet if one works for and believes in a happier future it will come—even romance. Five lame girls in our town and all are happily married, more happily than is usual and for good reasons. It takes courage in both partners and extra consideration on the man's part when the wife is physically handicapped. This must be said: Paralysis endows its victims with patience, which is not a bad attribute for marriage."

Ancestral Portraits Adorn Home of Kate Schweppe

THE HANDSOME portraits hanging above the family group seated in the picture on today's society page composed of Mrs. Irving Schweppe and her children, Kate, Irving Jr. and Palmer Schweppe, have quite a history. They are copies of the originals painted by Thomas Sully in 1830, when Margaret Halliday Sandford and her husband, Robert William Sandford, lived in Philadelphia.

The aforementioned personages are maternal great-grandparents of Mrs. Schweppe, who, the former Kate Thompson, was born and reared in Atlanta and lived here until two years ago, when business interests moved Mr. Schweppe to Houston, Texas. The paintings hang in Kate's home in Houston, and are attractive features of the furnishings.

The portraits were copied by Claude Herndon, well-known and talented Atlanta artist, who made excellent copies of the portraits, and chose the gold-leaf frames for the pictures. Thomas Sully was the great American artist who studied painting in Charleston, S. C., and Richmond, Va. He settled in Philadelphia, the home of Kate's maternal great-grandparents. He is famous for his full-length portraits of Dr. Benjamin Rush, Commodore Decatur, Thomas Jefferson, and Lafayette.

His celebrated picture of "Washington Crossing the Delaware" hangs in the Boston museum. Palmer Schweppe is the namesake of Palmer Dallas, the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Dallas, who was Kate's best friend and was called to her heavenly home at a very early and tender age. He is 14 months old and is a very beautiful baby.

THE ATLANTA colony at St. Simons Island swelled with the rising tide on Saturday, with the arrival of a gay group of Atlantans including Judy and Rufus Darby, Virginia Merry Jones, "Baba" Wilmont, Fred Bull, Blake Morrison, Fred Alax, Caroline Latimer and Mitchell Cox.

These popular Atlantans confided in Sally that they expected to spend a week at the island resort and during that time they plan to have a marvelous time swimming, bicycling and fishing. No doubt, upon their return, they will be full of stories about the festive times.

THE ARRIVAL in this city of little Joan and Joyce Leverton, brand-new twin daughters of Lieutenant and Mrs. William J. Leverton, of Washington, D. C., is causing quite a hubbub among the latter's girlhood friends here. Mrs. Leverton, you know, is the former Helen Bell, and with her husband and the twins is visiting her parents, the Walter Bells, on Linwood avenue.

And speaking of the babies, Sally is reminded of the original announcements issued by her parents upon the all-important occasion of their birth in late May.

Supposedly written by little Joan, the announcement was penned in a childish scrawl on white stationery resembling a personal letter. Centering the top of the page is printed "Twin Oaks Oasis, 8445 Bayview Boulevard, Friendship, D. C., May 20, 1940."

The letter reads: "I finally arrived an 4 a supriz I brant mii sister with me an h'r name is Joyce, mama is Jes' fine an daddy is feleing better al-reddy. cum up and sea us. Iuv, Joan leverton."

How Fast Do You Read?

Reading speed varies with the individual and his eyes! The eye reads in "goes and stops." Javal, a French scientist, discovered this in 1870. Intelligent reading—the ability to read easily and rapidly while remembering what has been read—depends largely upon good vision.

Fatigue caused by eyes that have to strain to see is not conducive to happy reading or studying. On school children with defective vision, the strain of studying is particularly great. To them, schoolwork is a burden that increases daily. And one child in every five has defective sight! Safeguard the precious learning years of your children. Look to their eyes! Upon them depend success in school and in later life.

For greater comfort and better vision, have a thorough eye examination made regularly. For appointment call Walnut 1355.

THE MORTAL STORM

Dr. Roth Tells Freya Her Life Is Her Own and She Is Free To See Hans

By PHYLLIS BOTTOME.

SYNOPSIS.

Against the wishes of her Nazi step-brothers, Freya Roth invites to her home Hans Breiter, a young Communist who has rescued her from a group of angry peasants during one of her sking expeditions and to whom, despite his philosophy, she has been immediately attracted. When Hans is attacked by Olaf and Emil as well as by Freya's aristocratic admirer, Fritz Maberg, Freya's disgust of the Nazi regime grows. Finding the attitude of Fritz's parents, long friends of the Roths, Freya is pursued by young Maberg. Instantly she admits that she is in love with Hans, much to Fritz's horror. Aware that it has long been the plan of the Mabergs and the Roths for Freya and Fritz to marry, Freya goes to her mother, the Grafin von Maberg, and tells her that she will not marry Fritz. The Grafin, already vaguely apprehensive because Freya is half-Jewish, pretends to understand Freya's attitude toward her son. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XXV.

"Well—what have you done?" her father demanded, rolling up his eyebrows until they became invisible. "So far I have heard only of one action on your part—you have refused Fritz Maberg—well, had you accepted him, you would have lost me! It is not that I dislike Fritz Maberg, but I know that I should have disliked you as Fritz Maberg's wife. You would have been an extremely troublesome one. So you see, that you were obliged to lose one member of your family from the moment that that inconsiderate young man proposed to you!"

"You keep pretending things don't matter!" Freya told him severely, "because you always want to laugh at everything! It is most unfair! I minded refusing Fritz—quite apart from hurting Olaf—very much indeed!"

"Of course you did," her father perversely agreed. "What you would have liked is what every nice young girl wishes—to keep all her lovers at her feet forever! Giving up a bird in the hand for a bird in the bush, was never a feminine proclivity. Such a thing!"

"Now you are being nasty about women!" Freya said crossly, "and you know Mother never allows you to be that! And you haven't said anything a bit helpful either—there's still Hans!"

The gleam in her father's eyes died out, he looked at her gravely enough now, and though Freya felt less cross, her heart sank.

"I was coming to that," her father said gently, "but I was not in a hurry to get there, for about Hans I have nothing at all helpful to say. It is a sorrow to me, for I can but be a sorrow to you, Freya, if you could accept it as a sorrow, and close this beginning of love in your heart, I would dare to counsel you to do it, for I fear that out of it a greater sorrow will be born. But if you cannot, if it is already too serious—and of vital a part of your being to cast out—why then remember that love is what you are yourself—it is not less or greater than the stature of your soul. Use this love then—generously, my daughter, and with wisdom—and without haste!"

"But Emil said," Freya stammered, "I mean—how can I tell how much I love Hans? Emil said that I should risk your safety and break up our home—unless I gave up Hans?"

"Emil had no right to say such a thing!" her father said more sternly than he usually spoke. "Romeo and Juliet broke up their homes. They broke them up by ill-considered rashness. The same kind of rashness, that their foolish parents used in trying to break their wills. You have no such parents, Freya, and I ask you never to do such a thing as those wild children did—be patient with your love! That is all, Freya, that we as parents have a right to ask of you—or you a right to answer. As for our home, it would not be worth holding together, if it accepted the sacrifice of a daughter's love. Ask yourself how much I should enjoy a safety bought at such a price! Have I ever prized safety for myself or for my children? I have prized courage. For with courage a human being is safe enough. And without it—he is never for one instant safe!"

Freya bowed her head. A curious feeling swept over her—a feeling that was like reluctance. Her father's words had set her free to go to Hans; and she knew that she was going; but for the first time the mad longing to go to Hans, and the ecstasy of being with him, dimmed down in her heart as a fire dims, in the light of the sun.

They sat alone together in their corner of the little Stube; their hands locked, their eyes sparkling with unconsidered joy. All anxious thoughts were shut away from Freya by the four square walls of their love. Nothing could happen; nothing had happened. She was with Hans.

They had just finished a wonderful supper, frankfurter and beer, paid for by Hans with pride from his first full wages. His apprenticeship was over. From this week on he was a skilled builder and bricklayer. He did not tell Freya that these were also his last week's wages. How could he bear to take the security from her happy eyes? He would have to tell her, but not yet, that his uncle had received orders to dismiss him. He must go back tonight, to the sparse, heavily-taxed frugality of the farm on the Wetterstein. There would hardly be enough food for them all, through the long snow-bound spring, until the peasants from the valley sent the cows up to their Alps; and would they be allowed to send up their cattle to a stronghold of disaffected peasants?

They might still send them, for Karl had never openly joined the party—only Hans' name was on the list; and peasants shut their mouths, and kept their hearts still closer shut; so that unless the lists were known to the Nazis, all might yet be well. Meanwhile, in spite of all shadowy portents, Hans, too, was wildly happy. He had eaten and drunk enough, a rare treat, for he was frugal and saved all he could, to help his family; and beside him was his girl. Such a girl—so kind—so gay! And with such a curious haunting beauty, unlike the mere stalwart freshness of peasant girls. Freya had such quick, graceful movements, like a wild deer; and her color came and went under her clear skin, not painted hard on the outside of her cheeks by wind and weather. Her voice, too, was sweet as music, so that the words Freya used ran on in his heart like a song.

His mind was full of happy images. He saw their life together as it might be, if their luck held. A little house in fields near enough to the city for their work, but away from the streets, and looking towards the mountains. He would not grudge Freya all that she had learned; she, too, should work, but when she had children (and they would have beautiful children exactly like Freya), then Hans would specially protect and work for her, making double money, until she was strong again. Their mutual earnings would insure that their children could be well looked after, while they worked, and what joy to return to them every evening! What holidays they would take together in the summer on the Wetterstein! Christmas, too, up there in the snow—with all the mountainside for a playground and every animal in the stall for a playfellow!

His body glowed, and his mind felt richer than any king's. How he worshipped this strange and yet so familiar creature by his side, whose lips he had so often kissed but never enough, whose body pressed against his own was the gateway to unlimited desire!

Tonight was the first time Hans had dared to meet Freya for over a week. Fortunately they had discovered a post office in a hollow under a silver birch that stood in an unfrequented part of the English gardens. Only Freya and the squirrels knew of his hole, so fearfully hidden away under dead leaves. Whenever Hans or Freya came to it, if there were any passers-by within sight, they innocently sprinkled breadcrumbs in front of a birdhouse placed opportunely opposite the silver birch, until the introducer disappeared. There was only one place where they could meet safely now, at the "Three Red Crabs," kept by Hans' friends, Julius and Martha Bauer.

The little inn on the outskirts of Munich was a Communist meeting place. If a stranger dropped in, all kept their mouths shut, until he had departed.

There was an inner room that the party could enter by themselves, and even a secret door in the kitchen chimney, that led to a tunnel underneath the garden.

Hans had not told Freya of the secret door, because he did not want her to think that there would ever be any need to hide; but it made him feel safer whenever he looked at her, to know that it was there.

No precaution was too great to take for her safety, one by one he had given up all the earlier chances and places of meeting, in the street, or any public place; but not even these sacrifices were now enough. Tonight—though Freya had no idea of it—must be their last meeting in Munich. From now on, if they met at all, it must be on the mountainside, and their news of each other must be cut down to infrequent messages through trusted friends.

Before Hans stretched long years of exile; strange work in a strange land, with a strange tongue in his ears; for if he could not get work in Austria or Czech-land—and it was becoming more and more difficult—he must go farther into Soviet Russia. The little house set in the fields must wait for a long time.

Hans did not see himself as helpless in a foreign land, for he was a strong, intelligent workman, nor could he do only one thing. Upon a farm or with land, he could do anything; and now that he was also a builder, he could make houses as well. No, he was fortunate, for he would only be lonely, and as he looked into Freya's eyes he laughed for joy, for no man can envisage loneliness while he is with the comrade of his dreams.

The double doors swung open precipitately and a man came in, who had been running and was breathless. He stood for a moment with his back to the stube, hanging his rucksack on a nail, then he turned and faced the room, noting in a swift secretive flash, all its inhabitants. Into the warm, smoke-filled room there had entered with him, the clear, sharp breath of the mountain air.

"Why, it's Seppel!" Freya cried in astonishment. "It is Seppel Neumer from the Gaudemus Hütte!"

The Arrow Strikes

Your Own Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21 and April 19 (ARIES)—The day favors ideas that start and finish now. Optimism or over exuberance for the future should be curbed, and if these traits are held in reserve, the day is auspicious for domestic, financial affairs and sociability.

April 20 and May 20 (TAURUS)—Personal affairs and wider interests may have a tendency towards strain, over excitement, financial loss and animosity to-day. An excellent day to stick to routine matters. The best vibrations of the day operate between 2 p. m. and 5:30 p. m.

May 21 and June 20 (GEMINI)—An excellent period for those things of a literary or educational nature. Friendships and associations with older people will prove beneficial. The best period of the day is before 4:48 p. m.

June 21 and July 22 (CANCER)—An excellent day for making steady progress, for organizing and systematizing your affairs. An auspicious day for new beginnings.

July 23 and Aug. 22 (LEO)—This is an excellent day, favoring general business, buying and selling. After 2:43 p. m. use extra caution in travel and matters of health.

Aug. 23 and Sept. 22 (VIRGO)—The entire day favors new and important undertakings. Good will and co-operation are more easily obtained. Intuitions will be keener and you will express yourself favorably.

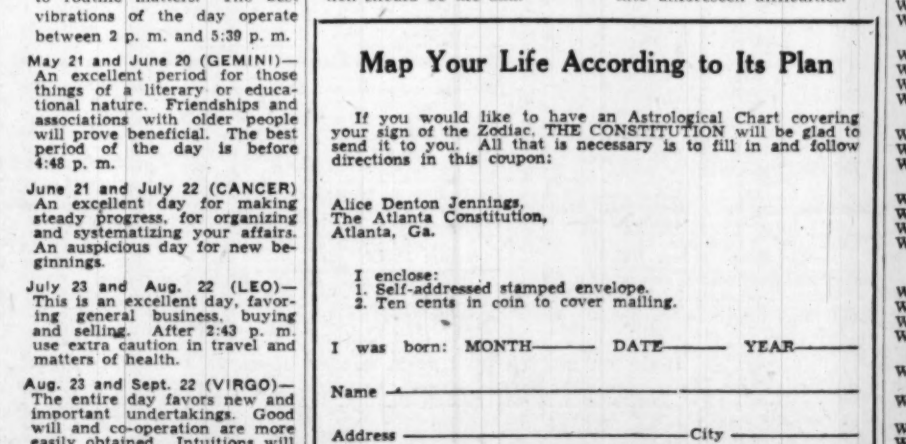

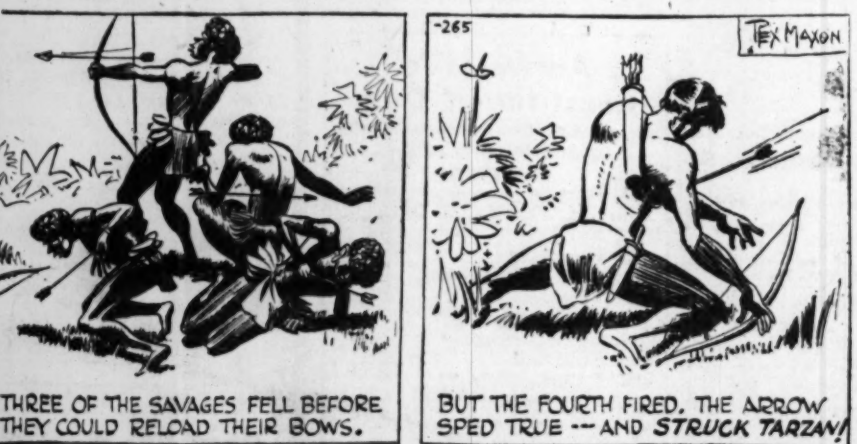

Sept. 23 and Oct. 22 (LIBRA)—An excellent day for new beginnings. Afternoon promises, dealings with professional people and finances, can take new turns, and you should feel a renewed interest and vigor in such affairs, without feeling that you are being hampered.

Oct. 23 and Nov. 21 (SCORPIO)—The best period of the day is before 3:47 p. m. The period favors general business activities, wholesale and retail, for dealings with professional people, for matters related to educational and land. After 3:47 p. m. use extra caution in travel and pay attention to diet.

Nov. 22 and Dec. 21 (SAGITTARIUS)—The period previous to 2:48 p. m. favors travel, putting plans into action, general business endeavors, conferences. The remainder of the day, however, is likely to be filled with changeable moods, and you may encounter those who are decided in their opinions. Discretion and moderation should be the aim.

Dec. 22 and January 19 (CAPRICORN)—The morning hours, and until 3:01 p. m. favor social affairs, friendships, business, buying and selling. After 3:01 p. m. instead of meeting harmony, you are likely to encounter contentiousness. This period is more favorable for working quietly.

Jan. 20 and Feb. 18 (AQUARIUS)—The entire day favors sticking to routine. Previous to 12:27 noon favors work of an administrative nature, both physical and mental. After 12:27 noon details should be considered minutely in all transactions, for new beginnings are apt to run into unforeseen difficulties.

Coral Isles Filmed.

Tom Marshall, Ichthyologist of Brisbane, Australia, has gone to Day Dream Island, Whitsunday Passage, to finish taking Barrier Reef shots for his technicolor film, "Roving Coral Isles." Some sea creature bit him recently and he suffered from a poisoned leg for some weeks.

Ostrich Skin Popular.

Large-scale slaughter of ostriches is going on in the Karroo district of South Africa, it is reported at Calitzdorp, following the abnormal rise in the price of ostrich skins. The skins bring $5 or more; the feathers less than a dollar.

Senate Group Passes Bill To Draft Millions

42,000,000 Would Be Registered; 1,500,000
Trained First Year.

By The Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, July 23.—Compulsory military training moved a long step nearer reality today when the senate military committee approved a revised Burke-Wadsworth bill providing for registration of 42,000,000 men, of whom 1,500,000 would be drafted in the first year.

Details remain to be worked out, but in the main the measure calls for:

1. Registration of all males between 18 and 64.
2. Actual conscription of about 1,500,000 men between 21 and 30 during the first year, starting October 1, 1940. There are an estimated 11,500,000 between these ages.
3. A training period of one year for those selected.
4. Base pay equal to that of the lower grades of the regular armed forces, starting at $21 a month.
5. Later draftees to be chosen from the 21 to 45 age groups.

To Senate Next Week.
Senator Sheppard, Democrat, Texas, chairman of the committee, predicted that the measure would be ready for senate consideration next week. Sheppard did not announce the committee vote, but said there were "few dissenting" voices.

In explaining the measure to reporters, Brigadier General W. E. Shedd, assistant chief of staff, said that the men would be classified for exemptions by local boards, similar to the World War draft boards. Men with families, he said, or men employed in national defense work would be placed in deferred groups.

The War Department contemplates that youths between 18 and 21 and men between 45 and 64 would be available for home defense service. Legislation providing this probably will be submitted to congress later.

Trained by Guard.
The job of training the draftees, Shedd said, probably would require the services of the entire National Guard. He added, however, that mobilization of the guard would require other legislation.

The committee measure would not interfere with voluntary enlistments in the Army, Navy or Marine Corps. Men eligible for the draft also could volunteer for the one-year training period.

If world conditions become worse, General Shedd said, "we might have to train more."

The President would have authority under the measure to determine the age groups to be registered and the ages and numbers of men to be actually trained. After a year of training, a draftee would be assigned to a reserve unit for 10 years, or until he reached 45, and would be subject to additional training.

Paris Today

(Walter Kerr, who was a member of the New York Herald Tribune's Paris bureau when the city was surrendered, has sent this uncensored account of life in German-occupied France by clipper plane from Lisbon, where he arrived July 15.)

By WALTER KERR.

LISBON, July 16.—German-occupied France is an economically twisted country, with its millions of people broken in spirit and doped with propaganda, groping about in an effort to reorganize their lives as best they can. They have little money. Their homes are destroyed, inaccessible or unhappy until a long search brings news of a missing father, brother or son, who may be buried by a roadside in a grave marked by a rifle or bayonet or guarded in an overcrowded prison camp.

Thousands and thousands are out of work. Many are living on credit. Families are scattered. Transportation is available only to a few. Communications are out of reach. The food is poor.

Men and women are living under restrictions such as they never knew before and showing little resistance. They are concerned more with their daily needs and discussions among themselves as to what caused the collapse of their country.

The German army rules. All communication and transportation facilities are in its hands. It controls the essentials by right of requisition and superior force, and the non-essentials by the simple fact that it has all the easy money; that is, it is well provided with paper marks that have no value anywhere except in the occupied areas, not even in Germany itself.

The army is working night and day for the coming attack on England. Everything is subordinated to this preparation: Food for the masses, transportation of refugees back home, hospital care. And while long trainloads of men and munitions run all the time, thousands of Dutch, Belgian and French cars carry soldiers about, a French-language press and radio controlled from Berlin keeps telling the people how much the German army is doing for the people and the millions of refugees.

It is true the army is helping. Daily it takes Belgians to the north in Belgian trucks it captured on its march through the Low Countries. Thousands are taken home by rail in French roll-

Rivers Studies U. S. Proposes Extra Session Pan-American Of Legislature Colony Control

Teachers Need $4,000-
000, He Says; Definite
Date Not Set.

By LUKE GREENE.

Governor Rivers indicated yesterday he might call a special session of the legislature before the Democratic primary, September 11, but some of the more seasoned observers expressed considerable doubt that the extra session ever would materialize.

The general opinion was that the chief executive might be sending up a "trial balloon" to see how the public would react to such a suggestion.

Principal object of such a session would be to give the legislators a chance to make good their promise to pay $4,000,000 in teachers' back salaries, the Governor said.

Maybe August 15.

He announced no tentative date for reconvening the law makers, but a source close to the administration said it would probably be around August 15, if the Governor decided to take such a step.

One of the main items of business at special session, it was said, would be the confirmation of the Governor's appointees. There are a number that must be confirmed by the senate, including the Governor's son, E. D. Rivers Jr., who was named chairman of the State Industrial Board, and L. L. Patten, member of the State Highway Board.

Remember Last Year.

Those skeptical of the call pointed out that a year ago the Governor named a tentative date for a special session, but never issued the call, finally casting the idea aside by declaring the international situation overshadowed state problems.

In giving his reason for considering a call at this time, the chief executive explained that the 1939 general assembly sanctioned a resolution for financing teachers' salaries for a full seven-month term in 1938 and 1939 and that the teachers continued to serve because of this resolution, creating a debt of approximately $4,000,000. Rumors concerning a special session were first circulated in a story in The Constitution several days ago, and it was pointed out then that a special session might be held August 15, or at least before the state primary.

Federal Pen Preferred to Prison Camp

Was To Have Left U. S.
Cell Today; Armed With Hammer.

Armed with a machinist's hammer, a 20-year-old convict yesterday afternoon took refuge on a precarious perch atop the Atlanta federal penitentiary's 100-foot-high water tower, and continued to defy all efforts to dislodge him early this morning.

While prison floodlights brilliantly illuminated the strange drama, the youthful prisoner banged on the tank with the heavy hammer, and waved to hundreds of persons gathered in the streets below. During the day and night, thousands of persons saw the man on the tower.

Identified by Warden J. W. Sanford as Andrew Jackson Wynne, of Savannah, the prisoner showed little effects of his long vigil early this morning and continued performing for the spectators.

Defies Guards.

Clad in the gray denim trousers of the "Big House," he defied all pleas of guards that he come down, remaining high on his perch through the night and into today, when he was to have been a free man again.

His reluctance to accept freedom, however, was explained by prison officials, who said that there is a detainer against him from the Chatham county prison camp, from which he escaped September 25, 1937.

Red-Hot Poker.

His Chatham sentence—four to five years—followed the burglary of an Episcopal minister's apartment, when he threatened to burn the minister's feet with a red-hot poker after the clergyman refused to give him money.

He was arrested by federal authorities in Virginia for violation of the motor vehicle theft law in 1938 and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary here. He began serving his sentence November 2, 1938.

Since 1:30 Yesterday.

According to the warden, Wynne climbed the ladder to the top of the water tower at about 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Wynne promptly took off his shirt and made himself at home high in the air, apparently unmindful of the torrid rays of the mid-July sun.

Presence of the prisoner on the unusual lodging place aroused excitement in the neighborhood of the prison. Wynne was plainly visible from McDonough boulevard. Several persons trained field glasses upon him. Now and then Wynne yelled and waved his shirt at onlookers.

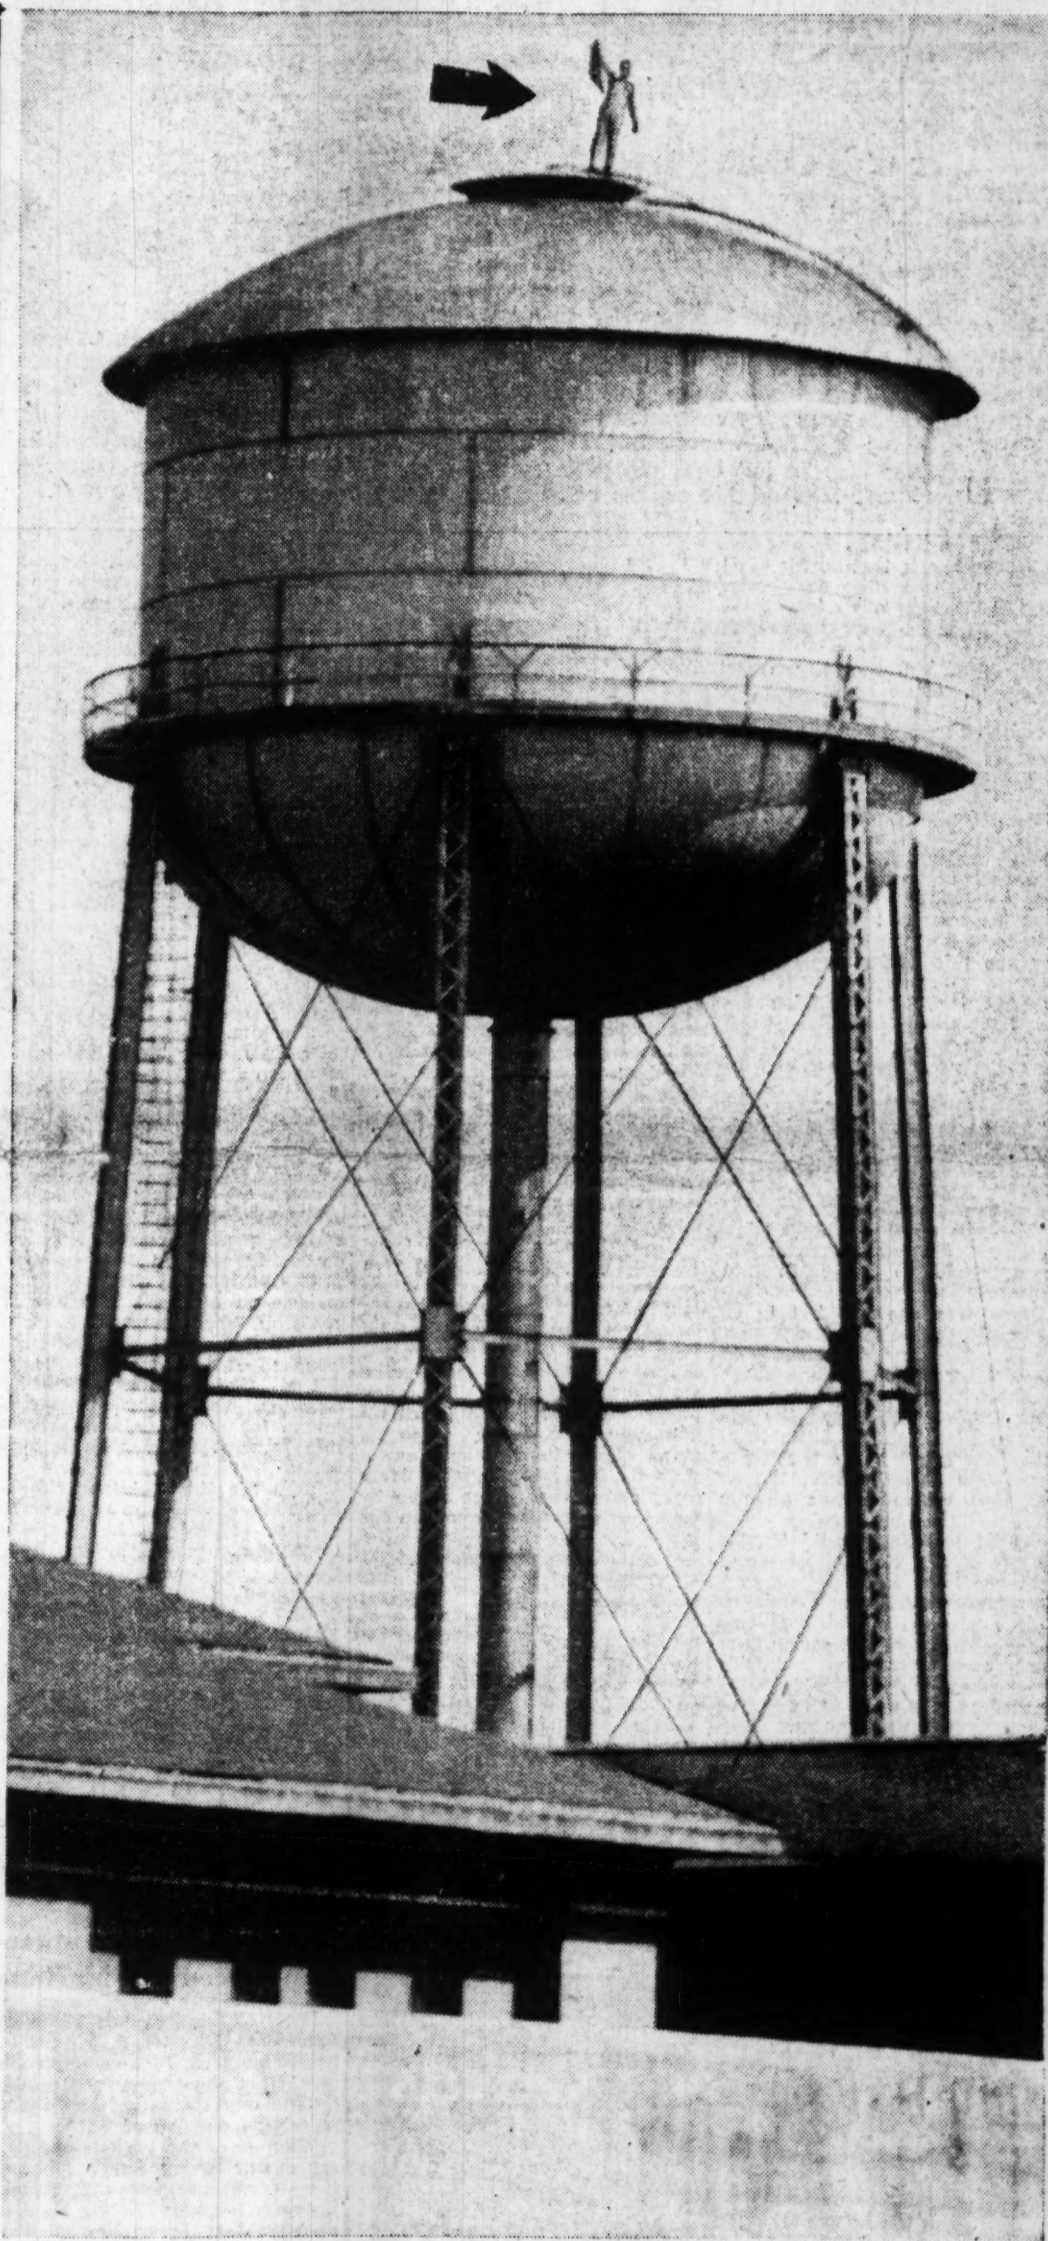

He appeared to be sunburned, but Warden Sanford said he had been on the work shift recently, and that for this reason Wynne was used to the sun and apparently undisturbed by the blistering heat.

Causes Traffic Jam.

As Wynne sat down on the tower, a traffic jam occurred around the prison as cars halted and their drivers and passengers craned necks to look at the convict during the home-going rush hours.

Asked what he intended to do about Wynne, Warden Sanford said:

"He's got a heavy hammer and I don't think it good judgment risking the lives of guards in attempting to dislodge him. Wynne knows he will have to finish his prison camp sentence and took this method of making it known that he'd rather stay in the prison here than leave it."

HEY! LOOK AT ME!—Armed with a hammer, Andrew Jackson Wynne, 20, took a defiant stand yesterday atop the 100-foot-high water tower at the federal penitentiary. Warden J. W. Sanford said Wynne was due to leave the prison today, and that the young convict did not want to leave because there is a detainer against him from the Chatham county prison camp. Wynne's presence on the tower attracted attention of thousands of spectators. He was still on the tower last night.

Party Bolted Burke, F. D. R. Quips to Press

Hanes and Douglas Placed Dollars Before
Humanity, He Says.

By The Associated Press.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., July 23.—President Roosevelt donned political harness today long enough to speak his mind about Senator Edward R. Burke, Lewis W. Douglas, John W. Hanes and former Senator James A. Reed—four anti-third term Democrats who have teamed up with Wendell L. Willkie.

Prompted entirely by press conference questions, Mr. Roosevelt said he understood that the Democratic party had bolted from Burke; that the administration felt the minds of Douglas and Hanes, former government officials, ran more to dollars than to humanity, and that Reed was well qualified to lead dissident Democrats.

Burke Defeated.

The President was first asked whether the word "bolt" properly described Burke's offer of support for Willkie. He made the remark about the party bolting Burke and then grinned until a roar of laughter at his answer had subsided.

Burke was defeated for renomination in the Nebraska primary by Governor R. L. Cochran.

Mr. Roosevelt was reminded, he said, of Lew Douglas and John Hanes by an inquiry about how he regarded "this dissent of Jeffersonian Democrats."

Doubts Hanes Vote.

Douglas did not vote Democratic four years ago, Mr. Roosevelt asserted, and he doubted that Hanes did, either. He added that they were honorable and amiable young men who formerly were in the government service.

Mr. Roosevelt was told that Reed had called a meeting "grass root, Jeffersonian Democrats," in Chicago.

Again? he retorted. It seems to him, he added, that Reed, who once represented Missouri in the senate, had done much the same thing in 1932 and 1936 and may be in 1928 and so was well qualified from experience.

To Meet Farley.

It was Mr. Roosevelt's first press conference since he accepted third nomination and told the Democratic convention that he would have little time, because of the international situation, to engage in purely political activities although he would answer a false political statements that came along.

The President said he expected to confer with James A. Farley, Washington soon, but had given no thought to a successor to Farley, who is giving up the chairmanship of the Democratic national committee to head a corporation to buy the New York Yankees baseball team.

He described as just another story from Chicago a report that Farley would resign Friday postmaster general.

Asserting that he presumed Henry A. Wallace would continue as secretary of agriculture during the summer.

Rally Around, Men-Cool Off, A La Jimmy

Pioneer in Male Comfort Finds Atlantans Have a Heart.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

The city editor was squirming in his chair the way he does when an idea is beginning to percolate in his skull.

It was a fatal sign, and one which the staff knew presaged a screwy assignment for somebody. "I've got it," he bawled, and each man took refuge behind his newspaper, hoping he would be overlooked.

The phone rang, and when the editor turned back, he was alone. This is a phenomenon well known in newspaper offices. It is known as the evaporating or disappearing staff, and it occurs most frequently when some chronic publicity-seeker is seen to approach the city desk or the city editor, by noise and squirmings, known to be dreaming up an idea.

"Cope, Green, Spalding Martin," bawled the city editor. Just as he expected, there was no answer. But this situation he had coped with many times. From their hiding places in the society department, the magazine department, the inner rer sees of the morgue and the sanctum of Sally Sawyer, he rounded them up.

Just Walk Around.

"Listen, you guys. It's hot, and what happens. Women wear clothes. Yet men go around in long trousers down their ankles, turning up, with collars buttoned up and ties and coats on. Now does that make sense, with the weather the way it is? It does not."

"Now what I want is one of you to put on a pair of shorts and a sports shirt open at the throat and walk around town and come back and write a piece about how much more comfortable a chap would be if he's just act sensibly, like women."

"See what the public reaction is. If anybody glares at you on the street, make a note. If a policeman chases you or for disorderly conduct or something, put that in. Now, who will volunteer?"

Nobody would volunteer. There were veteran reporters in the group, who had and would again have gladly risked their necks in the pursuit of news. But the thought of displaying their spindly, heavily bearded shanks to the public gaze was more than they could stand. Their alibis were luminous.

A Volunteer.

Over in the corner, watching his little scene, was Jimmy Kilpatrick. And, like a reporter, fading out when he scents a bad assignment coming, he melted away. Half an hour later Jimmy was back. He had on white sneakers and short, white socks with clocks.

He had on shorts that struck him halfway between knee and beltline. He had on a white, wide-meshed shirt, open at the throat and short in the sleeves.

He approached the city desk timorously. "How about me," he said.

"My boy, I could kiss you," said the city editor.

So Jimmy sallied forth. Nobody paid him any attention, except to gaze at him enviously as he strode, fresh and cool as a spring breeze, down the street toward Five Points.

He stopped folks to talk to them. What, he wanted to know, was on everybody's mind the most—the war, the third-term race—or the heat?

"What war?" they asked, mopping their brows, and "What third term?" they inquired, opening their coats to fan themselves with their hats.

Cool Memories.

"All I can think about in this weather," the people said, "is how nice it was last winter during the snow."

He stopped a lady he knew. "Well, Jimmy," she said. "Are men at last learning some sense about what to wear in hot weather?"

There was one last test to be made. There was a chance that the law would not take kindly to the sight of a man striding about in abbreviated trousers.

So Jimmy approached the officer at Five Points a little fearfully. He asked where the Western Union building was, though he knew where it was all the time.

"Right up there," said Traffic Officer E. T. Tumlin, gesturing with one hand and mopping perspiration with the other. "And," he added, "I wish I had me some britches like them to wear on duty down here. This Five Points is the hottest place this side of Addis Ababa, with no trees around and the sun pouring down."

So that's the story. The moral, if any, is this: With the thermometer soaring up into the 90's and the weatherman predicting no relief in sight, you can dress comfortably if you want to.

Nobody will look at you on the street as they thought you were crazy. They'll just think you are smart.

THE PIONEER—With the thermometer soaring, Jimmy Kilpatrick, Constitution employe, grabbed an assignment no other reporters had the courage to take. He strolled around town yesterday in shorts and sports shirt, talking to people to get their reaction to a man dressing comfortably for the hot weather. Lester Deadwyler, above, said the way he felt he'd like to go even further than Jimmy and take all his clothes off.

AT LAST—Miss Katherine Witt also thought it was a good idea for men to come out of their heavy cocoons and get comfortable these blazing July days. Not knowing it was a test case, she asked Kilpatrick if men at last were getting sensible in the matter of hot-weather dress. As for her, she just wanted to sit in a pool somewhere, eating ice cream cones. She said that's her idea for beating the terrific heat.

Father Asserts Young Convict Died of Beating

Byars Orders Full Investigation of Alleged Blackjacking.

The dead lips of a youthful convict of Georgia's "Little Alcatraz" prison at Dallas, in Paulding county, speaking yesterday through a tearful father, related a story of blackjacking and other mistreatment, which brought orders for a searching investigation from Chairman Grover C. Byars, of the State Board of Penal Correction.

Still not 19 years old, the youth, Paul A. Staffins, died Sunday at Grady hospital, where he was brought Saturday, delirious and desperately ill, from the prison camp.

"He told me," earnestly declared the father, W. A. Staffins, of 1710 De Foor avenue, "that a guard beat him in the head with a black-jack. He kept crying, 'Don't let them beat me—don't let them put chains on me again.' He had a big black blister on his left index finger where he said a guard hit him with a hammer when he didn't shove hard enough on a stalled truck. There were large sores above the ankles made by the clasp of a 'pick' hung on his legs."

Records Say Pneumonia.

Cause of death was given officially at the hospital as pneumonia. The whole record, including the statements of hospital attendants, Byars said, will be sought. Ruling then will be made on holding a public hearing.

Byars was told by W. R. Rickman, attache of the Brown Funeral Home, 1702 Howell Mill road, where the body was taken, that there was a black mark above the left eye, an injury to the left index finger and discoloration about the ankles.

A cousin of the dead youth, Yancey Yon, made similar declarations, and insisted death was due to internal injuries. He said young Staffins had suffered since childhood from a weak back.

Demand for Probe.

"One of the things we'd like to know," said Yon, "is why a young boy was sent to a prison camp especially set up for hardened criminals."

It was not certain yesterday whether the investigation would be broadened to include the practice of convicts at the camp of breaking their legs by fixing a foot beneath a fastener at the end of a bunk and rolling off.

Impressed by the recitals of the father, cousin and undertaker, Byars ordered an aide, H. C. Camp, present at the hearing, to start immediately to probe cause of the death and make a full report to him.

"We will go to the bottom," the chairman told the elder Staffins, shaking his hand consolingly. "We will not permit any prisoner to be mistreated."

Exonerated of Guilt.

Young Staffins was serving a sentence of from five to seven years' imprisonment, imposed for a robbery at Elberton, of which his cousin said, an elder brother, L. C. Staffins, also convicted, had exonerated him. He was but 17 years old when first tried.

Not until a guard from the camp came to their home last Friday did his family know of Staffins' condition, his father said. Hurrying to the camp, he and a relative found the son with a high fever.

With the aid of Attorney Russell Turner, who also represented him at yesterday's hearing, the father obtained Saturday an order from the corrections board to take the youth in an ambulance to the hospital. Upon arrival there he was in critical condition, attaches said.

Also in the hospital, critically ill, was a sister, Mrs. Jessie Haygood. Every effort was made to prevent her learning of her brother's death, but she came upon a funeral notice in a newspaper.

Yesterday the father hurried from the hearing in Byars' office to the hospital. He had just been told his daughter's condition was worse.

Mercury To Reach Middle 90's; Yesterday's High Was 92.

More hot weather, with the mercury in the middle nineties, is predicted for the city today, the weather bureau reported last night. The only relief in sight is the possibility of scattered local thundershowers late this afternoon, the forecaster said.

Yesterday's high was 92 degrees, reached between 4 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the downtown office of the bureau. A 94-degree high was reported by the municipal airport station.

In other parts of the nation, scattered showers cooled some sections, but most residents of the broad swelterbelt between the Rockies and the Atlantic looked in vain for relief.

Deaths attributed directly to the heat increased to 60 and the total of downings rose to 166.

In Chicago the highest mark of the summer—95—was registered. It was the fifth consecutive day that the mercury moved up into the noxious 90s there. For the first time within the memories of the warmest attaches, coats were removed in the August federal court. Youngsters who opened fire hydrants for curb-side baths kept West Side police on the run.

Some of the high temperatures were Pierre, S. D., 111; Phoenix, Ariz., 109; Chadron, Neb., San Bernardino, Cal., and Huron, S. D., 108; Rapid City, S. D., 107; Yuma, Ariz., and Fairbault, Minn., 105; Miles City, Mont., and North Platte, Neb., 104; Fresno, Cal., Dodge City, Kan., and Minneapolis, 103. Other cities recording 100 or higher included Raleigh, N. C.; Omaha, Neb.; Amarillo, Texas; Jackson, Miss., and Madison, Wis.

Forecasters reported that temperatures generally were above normal throughout the country despite rains that mottled the weather map.

Rivers Pardons 2 Ex-Officers In Bribe Case

Citizenship Is Restored to R. R. Davis and J. A. Bailey.

Two former Atlanta police officers—R. R. Davis and J. A. Bailey—under 36 months' sentence each for bribery were granted full and unconditional pardons by Governor Rivers yesterday while a third city policeman—G. B. Scoggins—was given a parole by the State Prison and Parole Commission, it was disclosed by Fulton county superior court officials.

Notices of the pardons and the parole were received yesterday at the courthouse.

S. Marvin Griffin, the Governor's executive secretary, said the pardons were granted to Davis and Bailey "in order to restore their citizenship." Both men have been on parole since April.

Never Served Day.

Neither of the three officers have ever served a day of their time, although the court of appeals in each instance upheld the Fulton superior court conviction.

Of the two other officers convicted in the law enforcement clean-up drive one—Deputy Sheriff G. H. "Gus" Howard Jr. has been given a pardon, while the other former policeman, F. J. Aycock, in Fulton tower, where he was surrendered last week by his bondsmen after being arrested on a charge of drunkenness. Before being surrendered, Aycock was at liberty under a $1,000 appeal bond.

Griffin said the pardons were granted "because numbers of reputable and respectable citizens had requested executive clemency."

Several Signatures.

Files of the Davis and Bailey cases disclosed clemency has been recommended by A. L. Belle Isle, president of the Black & White Cab Company; Alderman Frank H. Reynolds, G. H. Howard Sr., father of G. H. "Gus" Howard Jr.; C. Don Miller, Atlanta lawyer; Foster C. Law, merchant; H. Benson Ford, insurance executive; J. Ula Lynn and Martha F. Brown.

Last August, following a session with a Fulton county grand jury, Governor Rivers agreed to notify superior court officials before the granting of any pardons.

Fulton officials said yesterday they had no notice of the Davis or Bailey pardons until after they had been granted.

Former Governor Long Is Indicted in Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS, July 23.—(AP) Former Governor Earl K. Long, three former members of the dock board and the former assistant to the board's general manager were indicted late today by the parish (county) grand jury on embezzlement charges involving pay roll "dead heads" during the bitter February gubernatorial campaign.

Investments IN LIFETIME SATISFACTION

We learned from our Mothers and Grandmothers to treasure a graceful Pembroke table or an exquisite tambour desk. Fine furnishings have always been important to us in the South, so much so, that many of the cherished pieces we use today were brought back by young Southerners from European wedding journeys in the early eighteenth century. Now, as in days gone by, beautiful furniture for the home is a gilt-edged investment that pays day-in-day-out dividends in lasting comfort, beauty and satisfaction. Today, as never before, Davison's brings you fine furniture to live with and be proud to hand down—rich mahoganies, lovely fruitwoods, mellow walnut—with a craftsmanship that makes one say, "It's made like furniture used to be made." Choose your fine furniture with confidence at Davison's, as a lifetime investment in beauty and satisfaction, for yourself and your children's children.

Entries Mount As State Race Deadline Nears

1 O'Clock Tomorrow Is Time Limit for Primary Qualification.

By LUKE GREENE.

With 1 o'clock (Atlanta time) tomorrow as the deadline for filing entries for the September 11 state Democratic primary, candidates for state offices began a last-minute rush on the capital yesterday to get their names in the hat before the grand shuffle starts.

As the rush got under way, the State Prohibition party met in Decatur and nominated Major J. L. R. Boyd, attorney and secretary of the Standard Federal Savings and Loan Association, as their candidate for Governor, and Governor Rivers toyed with the idea of calling a special session of the legislature before the primary.

Mrs. Kathleen Hogan, assistant secretary of the state Democratic executive committee, began preparing for an even greater rush of candidates today and until the stroke of 1 o'clock tomorrow.

Many aspirants for office purposely have waited until near the deadline to see just what the political picture would be.

L. P. Glass, of Lavonia, who was named president of the Georgia Prohibition party, said his party would meet again at the De-Kalb county courthouse August 14 to complete its platform and consider any other business that might arise.

He said 11 Georgia counties were represented at the meeting, either by delegates or by proxy. John W. Roach, of Evans county, was named presidential elector for the First District, and R. A. Lee, of Franklin Springs, was named secretary of the party. No other officers were selected, Glass said.

Among the candidates getting in on the rush yesterday were Charles H. Garrett, who qualified for solicitor general of the Macon circuit; J. Eugene Cook, of Wrightsville, for judge of the superior court of the Dublin circuit; J. B. Rowland, of Wrightsville, for judge of the Dublin circuit; and Judge Clark Edwards Jr., of Elberton, for re-election as judge of the northern circuit.

Included in the delegation were Senator H. C. Kimbrough, Henry Zachry, C. P. Chandler, Roy Askew, F. C. Champion, chairman of the board of county commissioners; H. B. Kimbrough, Wiley Wisdom, J. D. Miller, H. A. Middlebrooks, and William Floyd. Incumbent George Hamilton and Pat Avery, Atlanta attorney, already have qualified for the state office.

Paris Today

(Walter Kerr, who was a member of the New York Herald Tribune's Paris bureau when the city was surrendered, has sent this uncensored account of life in German-occupied France by clipper plane from Lisbon, where he arrived July 15.)

ing stock. But all this is proceeding slowly, for the army has military work to do before it has time to move families back home and transport food from the farms to market.

Famine Amid Plenty.
That is why food is scarce in Paris, although the country is loaded down with meat, fresh vegetables, potatoes and dairy products. The stuff is there, but there are not enough men to handle it and not enough trucks to carry it. And so in Paris today, the city of good food in time of peace, you will get no fresh fish and no fresh meat, only frozen meat and a choice of one or two vegetables. Milk, butter and eggs are luxuries.

This food shortage and the scarcity of money are not entirely the faults of the German occupying force. The banks and the trucks and the refugees went south before it arrived. But the German army is taking its time in setting them right.

As long as the people feel the way they do, overpowered by an army of occupation and bewildered by their own collapse, Frenchmen will show little resistance to German arguments. Old German "the Jews," "the politicians" and "the English" is being told all day long.

Nazi Signs Mutilated.
And yet there is an undercurrent of resistance. Some weeks ago posters were displayed urging the people to have confidence in the German friends, that they had been betrayed by their leaders and now were being fed by German soldiers. The penalty for defacing one of these signs was death. But I do not know of one of them in Paris that has not been ripped and torn.

I could name restaurant proprietors, good men who have fed their clients on credit for weeks, who tell German soldiers that their radios do not work so that they do not have to listen to German broadcasts. I know of many Frenchmen who listen constantly to the London radio, although the penalty is severe.

In Paris you can see many other evidences of minor resistance. Every noon a company of German soldiers, led by a captain, on horseback and preceded by a band, parades down the Champs Elysees and goes before the Crillon and the Ministry of Marine on the Place de la Concorde. The French pay no attention.

Frenchmen now stay away from the Arc de Triomphe at the head of the Champs Elysees, for beneath it lies buried their Unknown Soldier. It is not a place for Frenchmen any more. Germans go there with their cameras to take pictures and look around.

The swastika flew from this memorial on the first day of the occupation. It was taken down on the second day just before the arrival of American correspondents from Berlin on a conducted tour.

In those early days German cars and trucks drove into town with French and British helmets tied to the hoods as trophies. That stopped, too. But a Frenchman can go to a newsreel and see pictures of his home being destroyed or the bodies of French soldiers, lying in the dust, ripped to ribbons or burned to a crisp. You can even see pictures of the June 3 raid on Paris and its suburbs, in which military objectives were hit, but in which many civilians lost their lives.

Hands of Newsmen Tied.
I do not know how well the story has been told of the first day of the occupation. It was into the city. Paris is still cut off from the rest of the world. When the army marched in the Associated Press and the United Press, the Chicago Tribune and the New York Herald Tribune were the only American news-gathering organizations represented. The rest had gone south.

But the hands of the men who stayed in the city were tied behind their backs. The night of the occupation the Berlin representatives of the three American news agencies arrived and early the following morning they filed their stories, without having communicated with any American, even in their own Paris offices, and without having talked to a single Frenchman. They were under orders and they followed them, but obviously they could not hope to cover the occupation of Paris adequately without talking to a Parisian.

Much of Misery.
So I do not know how much of the story has been told. I do not know whether the suicide of Dr. Thierry de Martel, the greatest brain surgeon in France, has been reported adequately. He died in grief and as a protest to the men who let this country go to pieces. I do not know whether the story has been told of the way French prisoners were handled, whether it was reported that many were kept in the damp grounds of the Elysee Palace until the American hospital protested, until ambulances were sent for and the men placed under doctors' care.

The first French-language newspaper appeared soon after the occupation. First was La Victoire, published by the Frenchman Gustave Hervé, an anti-democrat at heart and pro-German by inclination. But his pro-Germanism was not pro-German enough to suit the Germans. They suppressed his paper the day he wrote an editorial advising his readers to beware of an unjustified press campaign against the British.

Weapon of Propaganda.
Then came Le Matin, published by its owner, Maurice Buaunavilla, which soon became a potent weapon of German propaganda. A few days ago its editor for 40 years, Stephane Lauzanne, the man who published the paper in the south after the government had left Paris, with the Matin editorial staff and the Matin policy, resigned his position. The Matin of today is too much for him.

This newspaper and others like it, some violently anti-Jewish, all violently anti-British, are on the streets every day. They are carefully controlled by the Germans. Mistakes in grammar indicate that many of the articles are written by the first Germans in Paris after the occupation was a man in control of the press, Captain Vongrothe, once a correspondent in Paris of the Deutsches Nachrichten Bureau, an organization which still regards as a news agency in many parts of the world.

It is perhaps inevitable that the German language itself is spreading. Menus in many restaurants are printed in both languages, although there is such little choice that not many words are used. French-German dictionaries are sold on the streets. German-language signs are posted, such as one before the Crillon, "Parken auf diesem Platz verboten," (parking on this square forbidden). That is one word that is sinking in, verboten. A waiter at the Cafe de la Paix told me he had learned to count to 20 in German.

He will have to. The Germans have the money, or what passes for money. They fill the cafes and restaurants. It is unwise to disobey them.

The Cafe Select, at the corner of the Champs-Elysees and the Rue de Berri, made the mistake of reopening after the early exodus, without German permission. It stayed open one day. That was two weeks ago. It has been closed ever since, while the owner, waiters and chefs wait for permission. This permission is not easy to get, although the Germans, through press and radio, keep saying how necessary it is for men to go back to work.

Hotel owners are in tough shape. Room prices have been fixed, but only for the Germans, from 10 francs a day in small Left Bank hotels to 20 francs a day at the Ritz. That is about 40 cents a day in the finest hotels in town. Owners do not know how they are going to be able to pay their employees a living wage.

Germans Everywhere!
What a city Paris has become! The Germans are everywhere. It ceased to be an open city the day they arrived. Their generals and honored guests occupy every big hotel. Their men occupy the smaller ones. They operate in public buildings such as the Chamber of Deputies, the Aul de la Paix, the Invalides and the Ecole Militaire. Their motorized equipment is all over the place. Not all of it German by any means, much of it Dutch, Belgian and French, several thousands of cars and trucks of American manufacture. On their way through Holland and Belgium they picked up plenty of Chevrolet and Studebaker trucks, plenty of Ford Cadillacs and Packards.

Americans Not Molested.
It is true that things are not as bad in the city as they were a few weeks ago, although no one can tell what the country and its people will face when the offensive gathering organizations represented. The rest had gone south.

But the hands of the men who stayed in the city were tied behind their backs. The night of the occupation the Berlin representatives of the three American news agencies arrived and early the following morning they filed their stories, without having communicated with any American, even in their own Paris offices, and without having talked to a single Frenchman. They were under orders and they followed them, but obviously they could not hope to cover the occupation of Paris adequately without talking to a Parisian.

O.J. Franklin Seeks Oconee Judge's Post

Former Eastman Jurist Opposes Eschol Graham, of McRae.

O. J. Franklin, prominent Eastman attorney and former judge of the city court of Eastman, yesterday qualified as a candidate for judge of the superior court of the Oconee circuit. He will oppose Judge Eschol Graham, of McRae, the incumbent.

Judge Franklin was accompanied to the capital by a delegation of his friends who formed a motorcade from Dodge county, and donated his $250 entrance fee. He drew attention to the fact that he was paying his fee in person, since he was ruled out at the last minute four years ago by the chairman of the state executive committee because he sent his fee by telegraph.

Descendant of an influential Bulloch county family, Judge Franklin moved to Eastman in 1906 to begin his law practice. He was graduated from the University of Georgia with bachelor of arts and bachelor of law degrees.

After serving approximately 16 years as judge of the city court of Eastman, he left the bench in 1936. He has served for several years as attorney and clerk to the Dodge county board of commissioners, was mayor of Eastman and a member of the city board of education. He is a member of the Oconee Bar Association.

Births
L. C. Hardy, 125 Georgia avenue, S. E.; son, W. E. England, 70 Elbert street, daughter, J. W. Parker Jr., 71 Seventeenth street, N. W.; daughter, E. H. Lunn, 2737 Boulevard drive, daughter, J. V. ## England Relents In 'Careless Talk'

LONDON, July 23.—(P)—The ancient British right of "speaking out of turn" was given back to the nation today by Winston Churchill, who announced in the house of commons that all sentences for "careless talk" would be reviewed.

Pessimists and the less cautious were fined or sentenced—an ex-service man who talked about tank-carrying planes was fined the equivalent of $96, for instance—and people grew irritated.

One member of parliament reviewed 358 letters from constituents, demanding the right to say what they pleased. One of them said: "I have given three sons and most of my income to the cause. I'm damned if I'll stop talking about it."

Wally's First Mate In Divorce Action

SANTA MONICA, Cal., July 23. (P)—The first husband of the Duchess of Windsor, Commander Earl Winfield Spencer, U. S. navy, retired, goes to court tomorrow with his third wife for a hearing of their divorce action.

Mrs. Spencer, the former Norma Reese Johnson, widow of a Detroit manufacturer, declares her income is insufficient for her needs and asks $100 a month from Spencer's pension of $843.33 a month. He contends her $76,000 fortune is adequate for her.

Both charge cruelty and Mrs. Spencer alleges in addition that her husband is habitually intemperate.

the bill for the costs of the army of occupation is presented.

The 500 Americans in town have not been molested nor their property touched, although some have lost their automobiles and none can get gasoline except for relief work. There are also 600 British subjects about, and the Germans have not bothered them. In the Lancaster hotel there is an Englishman who dines every night one table away from a German general.

SEEKS JUDGESHIP—O. J. Franklin, attorney and former judge of the city court of Eastman, yesterday qualified as a candidate for judge of the superior court of the Oconee circuit.

Births

L. C. Hardy, 125 Georgia avenue, S. E.; son, W. E. England, 70 Elbert street, daughter, J. W. Parker Jr., 71 Seventeenth street, N. W.; daughter, E. H. Lunn, 2737 Boulevard drive, daughter, J. V. Hodges Jr., 812 St. Charles avenue, son, M. Frank, 882 Primrose street, son, J. D. Campbell, 3764 Tuxedo road, son.

England Relents In 'Careless Talk'

LONDON, July 23.—(P)—The ancient British right of "speaking out of turn" was given back to the nation today by Winston Churchill, who announced in the house of commons that all sentences for "careless talk" would be reviewed.

Pessimists and the less cautious were fined or sentenced—an ex-service man who talked about tank-carrying planes was fined the equivalent of $96, for instance—and people grew irritated.

One member of parliament reviewed 358 letters from constituents, demanding the right to say what they pleased. One of them said: "I have given three sons and most of my income to the cause. I'm damned if I'll stop talking about it."

The Army IN GEORGIA

Eight states of the Fourth Corps Area enlisted 2,033 men during the six days ending last Saturday, a figure believed to be an all-time record for peacetime recruiting in the United States.

Corps area headquarters was informed by the War Department yesterday that the total was 1,171 ahead of the region's nearest competitor, the Eighth Corps Area.

The previous high record, as far as is known, was hung up the previous week, when the Fourth area enlisted 1,439 persons.

The corps area recruiting machine is headed by an office in the Federal building, Atlanta. Under it are four district recruiting officers headed by Army colonels. One, at Charlotte, is in charge of recruiting activities for the two Carolinas; another, at Jacksonville, is in charge of Georgia and Florida; a third, at Montgomery, heads Tennessee and Alabama, while a fourth, at Jackson, controls Mississippi and Louisiana.

Each office has under its jurisdiction canvassers in nearly all towns with more than 5,000 persons.

TWO ATLANTANS MADE SECOND LIEUTENANTS
Promotion of two Atlantans to the rank of second lieutenant and their assignment to the 179th Field Artillery—"Atlanta's own"—was announced yesterday by Colonel T. L. Alexander, commander of the regiment.

They are Ralph G. Moye and Thomas E. Watson. Both are well grounded in military experience, Colonel Alexander said, having been engaged previously in the National Guard and officer reserves.

Moye and Watson will be assigned to active work with one of the regiment's three batteries and will make the trip to Louisiana in August. Meanwhile, the regiment is getting ready for its three weeks of maneuvers to start August 3, Colonel Alexander said.

CITIZEN TRAINEES FINISH RANGE FIRING
Citizen-soldiers at Fort McPherson finished their firing on the target range yesterday, after compiling some records that are commendable and raising an argument as to whether squirrel shooting or target practice develops the best marksman.

The men settled among themselves that the new M-1 rifle—the Garand invention that is semi-automatic—is a satisfactory weapon as far as firing comfort and accuracy is concerned, but Captain Fred Fister still is to complete compilation of the records to reveal officially the best shots in camp.

Lieutenant Colonel Clifford R. Jones, camp commander, said he considered many of the scores "pretty good," in view of the fact that many trainees never had fired a rifle before, few of them the heavy .30-caliber used in the army.

The four platoons each spent one day on the range, and during the seven-hour firing periods shot for records with four weapons—the Garand, Springfield and Browning rifles, and the .45-caliber service automatic pistols.

Among the high scorers were J. Russell Grove, Marietta lawyer, and Harry Hampton, Columbia, S. C., newspaperman, who is a great-nephew of the late Confederate General Wade Hampton.

The trainees turn today to combat principles, and to a continuance of close order and extended order drill that has become routine.

GENERAL EMBICK SAYS FOOT SOLDIERS NEEDED

Lieutenant General Stanley D. Embick, Fourth Corps Area commander, believes the foot soldier—on foot—is still the most important and the indispensable bulk of any army, general conceptions concerning mechanization notwithstanding.

The general, who made an inspection visit to the C. M. T. C. at Fort McPherson yesterday, pointed out that even modern, successful armies still are depending upon the "doughboys."

Mechanized divisions are but a small part of any army, he said, and while their development is important, no citizen interested in national defense should lose sight of the fact they cannot operate without support, and that their work is futile unless there are the foot soldiers to follow up, occupy and hold territory seized.

Motorized infantry elements, he pointed out, are helpless until they have their feet on the ground.

474 RESERVE OFFICERS ARRIVE AT BENNING

FORT BENNING, Ga., July 23. Reserve officers numbering 474 have arrived at Fort Benning to attend the Organized Reserve camp which officially opened Sunday and will close August 3. Officers attending are from states in the army's Fourth Corps Area. The camp is being held in the area that recently was used by the R. O. T. C. camp. Colonel William Scott Wood is in command, and Major William H. Craig is camp adjutant.

Recent changes affecting officer personnel at Fort Benning include:

First Lieutenant Francis R. Herald, transferred to Camp Ord, Cal. Major Henry C. Harrison, who was on duty with the R. O. T. C. camp, returned to his home station, and First Lieutenant William P. Yarborough, assigned to duty with the Eight Division at Camp Jackson, S. C. Lieutenant Yarborough was on duty with the 29th Infantry.

The flow of recruits into Fort Benning continues without a break, with applicants for enlistment arriving at all hours. On Monday, 60 applicants were enlisted.

Lieutenant Colonel Lindsay McD. Silvester and Major Lawrence C. Jaynes have gone to Fort Knox, Ky., where they recently were assigned to duty with the First Armored Division. Colonel Silvester will be a regimental commander in that division.

Colonel Silvester arrived at Fort Benning on August 11, 1937, for duty with the Infantry Board until his assignment as chief of the tank section of the Infantry School on January 3, 1939.

Lieutenant Colonel Francis M. Brennan also has gone to Fort Knox for duty with the First Armored Division. He has been executive officer of the Second battalion, 29th Infantry.

Recent promotions among enlisted personnel at Fort Benning include George Tutt, private first class, Company E, 24th Infantry, to the grade of corporal.

George H. Adams, corporal, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Second battalion, 66th Armored Regiment, to the grade of sergeant.

Joseph C. Morris, private, Headquarters and Headquarters company, Second battalion, 66th Armored Regiment, to the grade of corporal.

The People's Choice.

In order to keep the record clear, it should be pointed out at this time that critics of the Democratic convention and its actions are entirely wrong when they pretend, or assume, that the renomination of Franklin D. Roosevelt for the presidency was not in accord with the wishes of the people. The truth is, the average Democratic voter wanted Roosevelt for the candidate, regardless of third term arguments.

Some commentators—mostly Republican, to be true—have branded the Roosevelt nomination last week as "forced," and a good example of political engineering. As a matter of fact, the only way in which the nomination was arranged, was by the states, their committees and their voters, "way back in the spring. Most of the state delegations which voted for Roosevelt at Chicago did so under explicit instruction from the folks back home.

More than this, however, is found in the result of a Gallup poll taken among Democratic voters the nation over. This poll was completed since July 1, but before the convention met, so that it should be reliable as to the views of the rank and file voters at the time of the nomination. It showed that 92 per cent of the voters chose Roosevelt as their preferred candidate, 4 per cent wanted Hull and Garner, Farley, Wheeler and McNutt each garnered 1 per cent of popular approval.

Such overwhelming approval by the rank and file of any party certainly does not indicate any "forcing" of a convention nomination. That is, not unless the convention delegates fail utterly to reflect the opinion of their members.

No, it is clear that both nominees for the presidency are the popular choices of the average voters in their respective parties. While Willkie does not stand anything like as high, in a similar poll, as Roosevelt, nevertheless, the day before he was nominated, he topped all his Republican rivals. Willkie was the choice of 44 per cent of the Republicans questioned, Dewey was second, with 29 per cent; Taft third, with 13 per cent, and all others, combined, had only 14 per cent.

In Maryland, a truck which ran over a citizen's head, with no damage to the head, will be kept under observation for possible injuries.

Times Do Improve

Remarks about the weather are not only little but too frequently untimely. An editorial written in Atlanta in the midst of a torrid bell may, by the time it gets into print, be read by folk crouching over a grate fire. Our weather presents infinite variety.

But, be that as it may, Atlanta and Georgia may be congratulated upon their vast number of swimming pools, public and private. And especially congratulate the ladies. Good, old-fashioned word, rapidly becoming obsolete.

Last Sunday was a day for swimming. And diving. And staying under water with just the nose sticking out. The pools were full.

Time was when swimming—or open air bathing—was the exclusive prerogative of the younger male sex. When James Whitcomb Riley wrote of the "Old Swimming Hole," if that's the correct title, he had not thought of the fair sex in abbreviated costumes doing swans from a spring board. He was thinking of the small-town boys, "goin' in Washin'" in the raw. Feminine bathers, when Riley wrote, had a wash tub in the kitchen with the lights rned off. Or so tradition informs us.

But now, it appears from the public prints, swimming and diving are most dear to the feminine heart. At least, one sees a hundred photographs of the fair ones on beach or ringboard to one of the masculine variety. Great sport, swimming! Cool, too. And healthful. Atlanta is to be congratulated upon providing so many opportunities.

Whatever the outcome in Europe, says an analyst, the small nation is doomed. The majority, it seems, were just clerical errors in olden times.

The seeming entente of the aggressor nations only seeming. One of these nights, two of the second-story men will meet on the same rain-pipe.

Something new in military toggery is a bullet-proof jacket weighing 15 pounds. As the wearer can't run, he may need it.

War in America

Whether or not it is waged by enemy agents in this country or by misled sympathizers with the cause of the European dictators, the use of bombs in America, or sabotage in American industrial plants, is nothing more nor less than war, on small scale but nevertheless war, against this country.

The United States, regardless of its sympathy with fellow democracies that have been, or are, under attack from the totalitarian powers, has been meticulous in care not to do anything illegal in extending aid to the beleaguered nations.

Yet, already, there have been instances of bombing outrages, particularly in the New York area, that can be the result of nothing but wild fanaticism which thus seeks to aid, by any means, the Germans. The most recent bombing, at the New York World's Fair, was aimed specifically at the British pavilion there, though its unfortunate victims were members of the New York Police Department. What imaginable assistance such an act of terrorism could be to the Nazis, even though it had wrecked the pavilion and killed many innocent men and women, is impossible to see.

Now, because they have accepted contracts to construct 3,000 airplane motors for this country and 6,000 for the British, threats have been received by the Packard Motor Company, both at the main plant in Detroit and at the New York offices. Special police guards are constantly on duty at the Packard plants today.

That a great industrial plant, simply because it has accepted an important contract which, as loyal Americans primarily interested in the defense of their country, they should accept, should thus be threatened with terrorism that roots its source in a foreign country, is an event that should arouse the resentment of every decent American citizen.

It is believed the additional guards and precautions now taken will be ample to safeguard this plant. At the same time the bombings in New York, the threats against the Packard Motor Company, and other instances of attempted or threatened terrorism or sabotage, should awaken this nation, more than ever, to the real danger it confronts in the growing Nazi menace and should intensify every effort to root out, completely, every subversive foreign agent and every Fifth Columnist, citizen or alien.

An exact interpretation of the Nazi name for gestapo recruits is "blackguards." It is the rare instance in which no nuance is lost in the translation.

School Camps for All

They are starting something in New York which, it is hoped, will eventually result in summer vacations for every child in the public schools, in camps owned and operated as part of the school system. They want to make a month of camp life, each summer, part of the regular school curriculum.

So far, the Board of Education has not given its official blessing to the idea, but, in an experimental stage, it is now in its second year of operation. Commissioner Johanna M. Lindhof secured sufficient backing to send 110 children to camp the first summer and this year the original 110, with 25 additional, are enjoying the advantages. None of the 135, it is stated, are children of families financially able to pay the fees for private camps.

There is no reason why the complete plan, sending every school child to camp each summer, should not be worked out. It will require considerable cash outlay, both to start and to maintain, but the advantages to be derived are so great it could not but be a good investment. It teaches the children self-reliance, initiative, good companionship and gives them a knowledge of nature obtainable by no other means. Too, it contributes greatly to their physical wellbeing.

Commissioner Lindhof has the enthusiastic support of the teachers of the schools from whence the 135 first beneficiaries came, as well as of most other educators in Gotham. With such backing it will only be a matter of years before her complete dream comes true.

If feasible for New York, why not for Atlanta and every other city in the country?

Editorial of the Day

WHO IS A DEMOCRAT NOW?

(From The Montgomery Advertiser.)

Back in 1910 and 1912 the old New York World had some fun by raising the question, "What is a Democrat?" Even then there was confusion of counsel as to what constituted a Democrat. Today we may waive that question and raise another. "Who is a Democrat?" Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Carolina, announcing that he will not support Roosevelt and Wallace, says that neither of them is a Democrat, but that on the contrary they are New Dealers. He will not support the Republican nominee either, presumably on the theory that Mr. Willkie is merely an erstwhile Democrat.

In the Roosevelt cabinet are four men, two of whom have been life-long Republicans, two of whom were Republicans until recent years. Stimson and Knox are Republicans, Wallace and Ickes were Republicans until 1928 when Wallace supported Al Smith and 1932 when Ickes joined up with Roosevelt.

"As a life-long Democrat," Irvin S. Cobb, the writer, declares for Willkie whom he characterizes as an "incurable Democrat."

"Everybody," said Jim Farley the other day, "who knows anything about me knows that Jim Farley is a Democrat."

General Hugh Johnson says the party is no longer "run" by Democrats.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

SUFFER LITTLE CHILDREN! WASHINGTON, July 23.—The convention miasma is fading, and the realities of life in this year of very dubious grace are beginning to loom again. One of these is the almost unbearable problem of the English children. Despite the desperate need for refuge of millions of these children, and the willingness—even eagerness—of literally hundreds of thousands of Americans to take the children into their homes, nothing is being done to bridge the gap. The gap consists of 3,000 miles of ocean, mined and submarine-infested. Three weeks ago, the British ministry of shipping was prepared to evacuate the children in large numbers, and the obstacle to evacuation was the incredible red tape which State Department bureaucrats had wound around the children's feet. The red tape has now been cut. But, meanwhile, besides the Arandora Star and the Carinthia, the Georgic, the Franconia, and the Lancastria have all been lost on the Atlantic passage. This is the real reason why Winston Churchill announced in the house of commons that the scheme to evacuate the children had been temporarily abandoned.

The real story of the Arandora Star is unpleasantly instructive. It was, originally, to have carried a cargo of child refugees to Canada. The Canadian government was informed that it would leave with 2,000 children. A member of the government, who should have known better, publicly announced this fact, giving some indication of the time and place of the ship's departure. The British government, becoming alarmed, substituted German prisoners for the child refugees. And the Arandora Star went down with a German torpedo in its vitals.

Vessels like the Georgic, Lancastria and Arandora Star are fair to middling liners. If they are not fast enough to escape the submarines, the children can be sent to this country only in the great 28-knot superliners, or under convoy. There are not enough vessels of the Queen Mary class to evacuate sufficient numbers of children to prevent discrimination. There are no British warships available for convoy. For whereas the British had 455 destroyers at the end of the last war, they have less than half that number and must use all they have to hold the channel. Thus it is useless to hope that the British government will change its mind and send the children to this country in British bottoms. It would be a tragic mistake if the government did so.

THE GAP CAN BE BRIDGED A vast tonnage of American shipping is, of course, available to bring the children to the safe places which await them in the United States. Under an exception to the neutrality act allowed some months ago by congress, the Red Cross is permitted to send ships into marine combat zones for relief purposes, so long as safe conducts are obtained from the German government.

As it happens, the Red Cross proposes to carry on an extensive relief program this winter in the European nations for which Germany is contributing part of the American food surplus for this winter. Many wise heads doubt the advisability of allowing natural American generosity thus to give indirect aid to Germany against the national interest. But if this aid is to be given, certainly safe conducts for Red Cross child rescue should be asked as its price.

A strong movement for this purpose is now afoot. The Red Cross also has its bureaucracy, and it seems to be somewhat unwilling to move. The administration, afflicted with the counsels of opportunists, is not anxious to take a daring part. But the problem is so dramatic, the plan is so reasonable that action is at least possible. If the German government is publicly asked to choose between seeing Europe starve and bombing the children, or letting the children escape and seeing Europe fed, it seems inconceivable that even the gangster minds now in power in Germany can hesitate for long.

STORY OF SPAIN The acuteness of the need of the English children of Spain, except at Guernica, knew no such intensive bombing as the English children will know. Yet, in the camps of Spanish child refugees, competent welfare workers found that their horrible experiences had so imbued the children's minds that they could think, and talk, and picture nothing but the horrors of war. Many of them, it was feared, could never grow up into normal men and women.

Nor can one exaggerate the generous eagerness of the American people to meet the need of the English children. Instances can be multiplied indefinitely. Perhaps the most telling is the story of the Italian farm laborer and his wife, with four children of their own and no huge sum to keep them on. Against the advice of their employer and despite the fact their homeland is at war with England, this humble Italian couple insisted on applying to the child refugee committee to be allowed to care for an English child. Under the circumstances, it seems doubtful that even such isolationists as Burton K. Wheeler and Bennett Champ Clark will dare to urge that the children be left to face their fate.

"To No Man Will We Sell,

To No Man Deny—"

Every school child has heard of Magna Carta, the great document of human liberty which the barons of England forced King John to sign in the year 1215. Yet it seems, sometimes, that there is a woeful ignorance among many people as to the real meaning of this great historic document, a startling lack of knowledge as to the human rights guaranteed therein.

In all probability the four greatest documents of human liberties are the United States Declaration of Independence and Constitution, the French Declaration of the Rights of Man and this British Magna Carta. Remember, please, Magna Carta antedated all the others by centuries.

The four have many things in common. One, however, which is sometimes overlooked is that none of the four put forth new rights, but only asserted the rights which men with the spark of liberty in their breasts already claimed as their own.

The later documents, naturally, included rights not mentioned in the first, Magna Carta, for advancing social order had created problems and their concomitants in claims to freedom that were undreamed of in 1215. For instance, there is no mention of freedom of the press, because printing was unknown and there was, in actuality, no such thing as "press" to be free or bonded.

Magna Carta

Vs. Gestapo.

The eternal difference between the ideals upon which the British Commonwealth of Nations is founded and the ideal upon which Nazism stands which Nazism does is nowhere better illustrated than in one clause of Magna Carta. It reads:

"To no man will we sell, to no man will we deny Right and Justice."

In no nation founded on such a pledge as this could there conceivably be such an organization as the Gestapo. It preceded, by more than five centuries, the abolition in France of the infamous Lettres de Cachet. Do not think, for a moment, that the ideal expressed therein came true at once. In England, it was hundreds of years later before the Press Gang was abolished, for instance. But the ideal was there, even though not realized. Just as the ideals of the United States Constitution are still here though they, too, are not yet realized in full—far from it.

But, in the spirit that is Britain, in the hearts of Britons everywhere, there is today, and has been for many centuries, that "deathless commitment to Freedom" for which the empire is today, once again fighting with backs to wall.

Four

Clauses.

There are four clauses in Magna Carta that every lover of human liberty should know. Here they are:

"The Church shall be free and have her whole rights and her liberty inviolate."

"No tax shall be imposed unless by the Common Council of our Kingdom."

"No freeman shall be seized or imprisoned, or outlawed, or exiled, or judgment of his equals or by the law of the land."

"To no man will we sell, to no man will we deny Right or Justice."

Those statements in a document written and signed in 1215, are the common heritage, not only of every citizen of any unit of the British Commonwealth of Nations, today, but of every citizen of every land which bases its justice upon the English Common Law.

The Evil

Contrast.

What, in the name of all that is logical and intelligent, can such a thing as Nazism offer compared to this?

Nazism with its Gestapo, that imprisons, kills innocent men and women for no reason of justice whatsoever.

Nazism with its concentration camps where helpless beings may be imprisoned, abused and slain without recourse or hope.

Nazism with its awful persecution of tens upon thousands for no other cause than their race happens to be different from that of the temporary masters.

Nazism that would arrogate to itself a racial superiority.

Nazism which would bend and crush the church to its own wicked will.

Nazism which enslaves all the people and which cheats and lies and betrays helpless weaker nations.

For me, I pray daily for British victory, so that a shamed world shall never see a people abused in the dust, whose idealism gave the world, so long ago—

"To no man will we sell, to no man will we deny Right or Justice!"

Twenty-Five

Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Saturday, July 24, 1915:

"Washington, July 13.—The American note on submarine warfare, presented to Berlin today by Ambassador Gerard, was made public here tonight. It reveals that Germany has been informed it is the intention of the United States to regard as 'deliberately unfriendly' any repetition by German naval commanders of acts in contravention of American rights."

And Fifty

From the news columns of Thursday, July 24, 1890:

"This morning, at 11 o'clock, at the Chamber of Commerce, the citizens of Atlanta will meet to protest against the passage of the iniquitous force bill."

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Neutralizing Hitler Fumes

NEW YORK, July 23.—Adolf Hitler has written, as an article of faith of the German nation, that the lie is an honorable and deadly weapon which ultimately brings the reason of the enemy and leaves him helpless. His constant reiteration of the term "warmonger" constitutes a use of this weapon, and, as a sort of decontamination measure, those who have been sprayed with the poison should remind themselves of the facts after each attack. Thus may the fumes be neutralized.

The facts, contrary to much pretentious discussion and writing, are not lost or compromised in the complications of European political rivalries and history.

One of the most important facts, almost forgotten now, is that the German nation, at the height of its old military power and arrogance, was responsible for Bolshevism in Russia. Hitler, of course, knows this, and his clamor concerning the Jewishness of Bolshevism does not remove the damned spot, although his repetition of the first great lie of Hitlerism has served to confuse many otherwise intelligent beings. The German nation of Kaiser Wilhelm provided safe-conduct for Lenin from Switzerland to Russia so that Lenin and his followers could finally take Russia out of the first World War.

A German Contribution

Although a large proportion of the original Communists were Jews, the fact remains that nothing which they did could have been done without the first assistance of the German government, which was given recklessly but deliberately for the sake of a temporary military advantage. This fact should be reduced to handy form for desk and wall-memoranda purposes, as a ready reminder that Bolshevism is a German contribution to the woes and iniquities which plague the unfortunate human race today.

Another fact which should be kept at hand and squinted about the premises of the civilized world after each attack of Hitler's new weapon—the oft-reiterated lie—contains the truth regarding the relative militarism of Germany, on one hand, and the Allies, on the other.

It was Hitler who armed and planned for offense, and constantly padded his legions and increased war. The French built their Maginot line as a defense, a solid, immovable barrier intended to withstand, not to launch attack. Their whole strategy was defensive, and their arms were pathetic by comparison with Hitler's.

This weakness may be attributed to various causes, but it insults intelligence to say in one breath that the Jews hate Hitler and want him destroyed, as unquestionably they do, and in the next breath to say that they sabotaged the French effort to arm and fight him and to follow that contradiction by calling them warmongers.

Never On

Same Side

It is equally incoherent to blame Bolshevism and capitalism together, because they are as irreconcilable as Jewishness and Hitlerism, and will not be found on the same side of any fight.

The truth reveals, also, that the British were pitifully weak in arms and trained soldiers and humiliated themselves in an attempt to avert war by appeasing Hitler, and went to war hesitantly and very ineptly only when Hitler invaded Poland in violation of his promises and to avenge inhumanities on German minorities which he discovered very abruptly not long after he had expressed his complete satisfaction with the treatment of the Germans in Poland.

The truth shows that Hitler impounded the head of the Austrian government and seized that country, and, in every case of invasion since then, has been the aggressor who carried war to smaller and weaker peoples in Denmark, Norway, Holland and Belgium.

Allies Not

Invaders

It was not the Allies who invaded any of these countries. They merely rushed in, bravely but hopelessly, except in the case of Denmark, which was inaccessible, to resist the warmarker, and no discoveries or forgeries of documents by Hitler ever will eradicate the fact that it was Germany which invaded peaceful countries without the slightest preliminary discussion of grievances or declaration of war.

Further, as an incontinent measure to be used after each attack of Hitler's weapon of the new warfare, it should be instantly remembered that the despised Bolshevism of Russia, which Hitler has denounced with shrewish fury on many occasions, has been his ally in this war, and gave him the "go-ahead" last summer in the Nazi-Bolshevik treaty of alliance.

ONE WORD MORE

"WINGS OF ATONEMENT" One of the special writers at the Chicago convention last week was Mr. Paul Gallico. Mr. Gallico was, for a number of years, a sports columnist for the New York Daily News. His column was the most widely read in New York. Later on he retired from sports and wrote fiction. He has sold every story offered to magazines and is writing, I think, the most entertaining fiction written in our country today.

The man has been around and seen things in this and other countries. And he is a great reporter. When he was in sports he learned fencing, boxing, skiing, and had a working knowledge of all the subjects he reported. When he became interested in aviation he learned to fly a plane. Not all his fiction is fiction. Being a realist, which is to say he is an incurable romanticist, and having that sort of background, he doesn't write anything dull.

A couple of weeks ago in the Saturday Evening Post he had a story, "Wings of Atonement." Sir Hubert Wyndmondham had got his old Bristol fighter, survivor of the first World War, back into the air. His son had been killed in a plane fighting the Germans off the coast of Norway. His son's plane had been slow. His son's squadron had been outnumbered. His father got the old plane into the air:

"On earth he was leaving his failure, the tragic blunder of the England that he had helped to make, the bitter failure of blindness and complacency, an England close to defeat, insufficiently prepared to defend itself and its great empire, overwhelmed from the air, bombed and blasted and shaken, like a fat old champion of the ring who has forgotten how to train and finds himself smashed, bleeding and reeling from the first punch delivered by a hungry young opponent."

So, the Englishman climbed into the sky to hide behind the clouds. He was to wait until the first bombers came that morning, as they came every morning. Then down he was to come, he in his puny plane, to do them battle and to die himself with one of their bombers to expiate the sins of greed, dullness and stupidity.

THE BOMBERS CAME Up there in the air he recalled his son's letter, of how in the early fights their planes were too slow and too few. The Nazi pilots were no better. Their planes were.

He wondered how many of the Nazi ships he would be able to take with him. They came at last. He dove through the clouds to the edge of the mists and hung there.

Even though alert, he was surprised. The huge ships swept beneath him and away before he was ready. Others were coming. He went down, got a huge ship in the sights and began firing. Every third bullet was a tracer. He could see them hitting the hide of the bomber. But it droned on. And then he saw the white marks on the bomber where the bullets had flattened against the armor.

While he raged a British squadron came out to meet the fighter planes which had accompanied the last squadron of bombers. He saw them destroy two of the German ships and then the British squadron was obliterated by sheer numbers. The enemy moved on.

He was spinning down, his oil line cut by a stray bullet. He got the plane out of the spin and landed it, a bit shaken. He had not even succeeded in dying. He looked and saw his ancestral home burned and destroyed.

The bombers were returning. He could see the bombs fall. One fell a hundred yards away. He did not flinch. He knew then that death was not for him. Nor for others like him who had left England, rich and soft, to be looked. The young were to die. The little men in the villages and on the farms, who had depended on their leaders, they would die. But not those who were guilty. They, the guilty, had to atone by living.

THE IRONIC RESULT I talked with Mr. Gallico on two or three occasions and on one of them the story was mentioned.

"You know what happened?" he said. "It was damned ironic. Nearly everyone who has mentioned it to me has said, 'I'll bet that story makes the English think.' Not a one of them stop to think we are, or at least were, going the same way."

We can be ready in three years. Yet there are, notably in the Republican camp, those who decry the President's efforts to arouse this country.

The facts are this is an hour of peril for this nation. No one wants us to go to Europe to fight. We could not if we wished. But everyone should demand that our leaders be honest and speak out plainly. There is enough of this hiding of facts. We must hurry our preparation with all we have.

Meanwhile, what about our own wings of atonement? Will all our leaders, regardless of party, speak out? Or will they, for the sake of votes, betray the people of this country into a false sense of security?

Commercial sales of timber and other forest products from government-owned forests in 11 southern states and Puerto Rico amounted to $892,237 during the last fiscal year, Regional Forester Joseph Kircher announced yesterday.

The southern region, Kircher said, was second among the 10 United States forest regions in funds produced. The Oregon-Washington area was first with $1,241,870.

Twenty-five per cent of the money turned into the treasury will be returned to governments of the counties from which the timber came, prorated on the basis of timber removed. The funds are distributed in lieu of taxes.

Good Morning—By Louie D. Newton

Dr. J. C. Wilkinson was telling a group of us a story the other night as we rode along home from Nashville which vividly points out a definite case of religious measurement—not always an easy thing to do.

He said that some years ago Dr. Charles W. Gilkey was speaking at the University of Georgia, and in turn the course of his address, he said:

"Look at the young men in any given town who one day meet on the sidewalk. One of them is on his way to church. He invites his friend to join him. The friend declines, stating that he will go on to his office and open his mail. An hour later they meet, and walk along together to their homes. You cannot discover any difference in these two young men on that particular Sunday morning as they walk along."

"But look at those two men 20 years later, and anybody can see the difference."

That is one of the finest illustrations I have ever heard of what is happening in the lives of men and women in every community throughout the land. I think the principle set forth in this illustration will be found an accurate measurement for the great majority of the lives about us.

Church attendance, Bible study, daily devotions, Scriptural stewardship of money, time, influence—these are the equations that ultimately determine character and destiny.

One of the tragic tendencies of our day and generation is the drift of prominent young business and professional men toward Paganism—utter disregard of church attendance and other religious observance. The effect of such Paganism may not be so noticeable at the moment. They are not conscious, perhaps, of what is happening to them. They are coasting. But if they would only stop for a moment and think on their ways they would know that they are going down hill. They are relying upon the reserve which they inherited from their parents and from devout neighbors. Such reserve is soon exhausted.

Some of these clever young men defend themselves on the ground that the preachers are not up to date, that the music is not as good as they heard at the opera or over the radio, that they are forced to hold business conferences on Sunday in order to direct their "big" business, that Dad was a good man but he didn't know about "modern" stream-lined life, etc., etc.

Twenty years from now, if they pursue their course, everybody will look upon these men, pitying them in their loss of the values that endure.

Toccoa Hears All Candidates For Governor

Two Blast Administration;
Two Echo Democratic Convention.

TOCCOA, Ga., July 23.—(P)—Two of Georgia's gubernatorial candidates castigated present and past state administrations today and the other two voiced echoes of the Democratic national convention.

Abit Nix asserted the "political egotism" of Eugene Talmadge would "turn into despotism at the first opportunity."

He said the Talmadge reign from 1933-37 "showed that he does not think of free education as a necessity in the modern world."

Talmadge singled out for criticism the wildlife agency of the present administration, charging "it has allowed conservation to stop and the fine fish hatcheries to go to ruin."

The former governor said coastal fisheries particularly "need proper protection and conservation to avoid total extinction."

Candidate Columbus Roberts declared that since the Chicago convention "it has become increasingly clear that enemies of democracy in Georgia will attempt to use the September primary to lay the foundation for a fight to carry the state for the Republican ticket next November."

But Georgia, he added, "won't be deceived by the puppets of privilege disguised as friends of liberal democracy."

Also glancing back at the convention, Hugh Howell predicted "Roosevelt as President, Wallace as Vice President and the Democratic party are going to sweep this country in the November election."

Describing himself as a "lifelong Democrat," Howell said "the host of militant Democrats in this state are standing squarely behind Roosevelt, Wallace and our country."

Theater Heads Oppose Latest Booking Plan

Regional Owners Object To Buying Films Five at Time.

By LEE ROGERS.

Motion Picture Editor.
JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 23. Southeastern theater owners began a fight here today to protect their pocketbooks and those of their patrons.

The drive also seeks to retain the current power of a theater owner in buying just those films his patrons wish to see.

First step was the adoption of a resolution opposing a plan now reported agreed upon by government officials and distributors, offering films for sale in blocks of five without granting privilege of rejection of any in the group regardless of morals or racial objections.

The resolution was presented by Nat Williams, of Thomasville, and adopted unanimously by the convention of the Southeastern Theater Owners' Association. The association contends adoption of the sale plan will cause theatergoers to pay more for good pictures and force them to see four inferior films in order to see one good one.

M. C. Moore, of Jacksonville, was re-elected president at the closing session, and Nat Williams was named vice president. New directors include Mrs. Louis Bach, R. B. Wilby and Arthur Lucas, of Atlanta; J. H. Thompson, of Hawkinsville; J. C. H. Wink, of Dalton; W. M. Karth, of Swainsboro; and Fred Weis, of Savannah.

at the CITY HALL

Mayor Hartsfield yesterday had on his desk several hundred papers passed at council's regular session July 15 and at the adjourned meeting last Monday. He had not yet begun action on them, but said he expects to begin his studies probably today.

George Hauck, of the construction department, was made a forerunner by city council when $150 was provided to supplement his salary as a truck driver for the remainder of the year. Approval was given by the council. The only other hurdle to be taken by Hauck in his promotion.

A total of $305.74 will be added to the cost of construction of a new prison building at the city dairy farm under action of city council. H. H. Gibson, superintendent, asked permission to divert that amount from the sale of farm products to the building fund.

Grady hospital's board of trustees plans a vigorous campaign in behalf of the September 4 $40,000 bond issue, of which $20,000 would be used for improvements at Grady and Battle Hill sanatorium. City Clerk Joe Richardson will provide the trustees, free of charge, a registration list which will be used in a mail campaign.

Fourteen-day vacations with pay will be granted truck drivers and watchmen of the city sanitary department as a result of city council's action. More than 100 men are affected.

Grady hospital will expend $250 on new X-ray equipment under a resolution passed by city council which now awaits the approval of Mayor Hartsfield.

Raymond W. Torres, engineer-secretary of the city planning commission, yesterday joined the ranks of "working" department heads. His secretary, Mrs. Francis Newman, was out of the city on a vacation.

Routine matters were considered yesterday at the regular meeting of the city personnel board. The chairman, J. A. (Gus) Harper, was out of the city, but James P. Allen and Aubrey Milam, other members, were present.

at the COURTHOUSE

John Harrison, veteran reporter for the Fulton Daily Report, was confined yesterday to Georgia Baptist hospital. He was taken ill Monday night.

Five convictions in recorder's court of failing to stop at stop signs were appealed to the Fulton superior court yesterday by George Muckie through his attorney. He appealed four convictions last week, making a total of nine appeals from cases in the traffic court since June 25.

Mail Carriers Choose Same Officers Again

Resolution Urging James Farley To Continue Post Passed.

Georgia's rural mail carriers closed their 37th annual convention here yesterday by re-electing the full slate of officers, passing a resolution urging James A. Farley to continue as postmaster-general, and urging that the national convention of all rural mail carriers in the United States be held in Atlanta next year.

Other resolutions urging increasing delivery on tri-weekly routes to daily except Sunday, favored increasing both federal and state funds for the construction of rural post roads, and asked that relatives of carriers be given preference as replacements when regular carriers were called on National Guard duty.

One resolution suggested that all paid delegates to the national convention be penalized if they failed to attend at least 75 percent of the business sessions.

Officers re-elected were: Jere Mobley, Albany, president; Cecil F. Hall, Sandersville, vice president, and E. S. Sisk, Lexington, secretary.

House Will Study TVA Defense Sum

WASHINGTON, July 23.—(AP)—Appropriation of $25,000,000 for a three-year expansion program by the Tennessee Valley Authority in the interests of national defense will be considered by the House early next week.

The rules committee today granted legislative precedence to the measure to increase the authority's power development, and it was planned to bring it before the house Monday or Tuesday.

The three-year program would cost a total of $65,000,000 and involve construction of a hydro-electric dam on the Holston river, near Knoxville; a steam plant, as well as additional generating units at Wilson and Pickwick dams.

Chairman Woodrum, Democrat, Virginia, of the house appropriations deficiency subcommittee, told the rules body he proposed to offer an amendment to the TVA, urged by the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, which would require the defense advisory commission to approve the extent and location of new transmission lines to carry the new power.

Dodge Relates Threat, Beating In Labor Probe

Ex-Minister Testifies in Fitzgerald Mills NLRB Case.

WAYCROSS, Ga., July 23.—(AP)—The Rev. Witherspoon Dodge, former Atlanta minister, engaged in labor union organization, testified today he was seized on a Fitzgerald hotel porch last August 8, whisked out of town and given a severe beating.

His testimony was given in a district federal court hearing on charges that the Fitzgerald cotton mills violated the Wagner labor relations act.

An organizer for the Textile Workers of America for the past several years, the witness said a dozen men seized him while he talked with a cotton mill official.

His life was threatened and after the beating he was left in the woods, the minister added.

Alton Lawrence, TWOC representative and a principal government witness, testified he was struck by a mill employee, Glenn Melton, when efforts were being made to unionize the mills in 1938.

He denied calling mill workers "yellow and a coward" for signing union resignation slips.

FBI Chief Warns Of 'Column' Threat

NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover roundly condemned Communists and Bundsmen today, and declared that the nation was facing a new enemy "that is far more crafty, scheming and despicable than the kidnaper, the highwayman or the burglar."

"The forces that threaten America today," he told 400 police chiefs attending a New York state convention, "are motivated by avarice, lust and an insatiable thirst for power. They would destroy every vestige of our traditions, institutions and sacred heritages. They have but one principle—that the ends justify the means."

He said the problem of coping with the foreign agent, the saboteur and the subverter was one of national ramifications, and one that "must be met by the best of trained intelligence and efforts that we in law enforcement can muster."

"This place has cleaned up and its operation now is O.K."

This little fragment, torn at random from one of our investigators' daily reports, may be just a scrap of paper—but to the brewing industry it's mighty important, as it should be to the citizens of Georgia.

It simply means that the program of the Brewers and Beer Distributors Committee of Georgia is accomplishing its objective—"cleaning up or closing up" those few retail beer outlets that operate in a manner inimical to public welfare and the future of an important Georgia industry.

Sixty-five retail outlets, out of 157 warned by our Committee, have eliminated the illegal and unwholesome conditions that made them community nuisances. We're for these and other law-abiding retailers one hundred per cent.

Thirty-three retailers did not see fit to regard our "clean up or close up" program seriously. Their licenses have been revoked.

Hamp Chappell, and three others, here next week, will be prominent merchants and professional men of Carroll county, city and county officials at Carrollton, educators and farmers.

Subpoenas had been written by Clerk of Court John T. LeCroy today and will be issued within the next few days.

Listed by the defense will be nearly 150 character witnesses, including Mayor Stewart Martin, of Carrollton; Tom Robertson, Carroll county court clerk; Matt Griffin, Carroll ordinary; J. H. Buzson, tax collector; W. R. Robinson, judge of Carrollton city court; O. L. Spence, postmaster, and a brother of Warden Charley Spence, who will appear as material witness for the state.

W. B. Averill, Broker, Is Found Fatally Shot
NEW YORK, July 23.—(AP)—A bellhop entering the Ritz-Carlton hotel apartment tonight in which William Bishop Averill, 65, had lived for 30 years, found the socially prominent cotton broker seated in a chair, a bullet hole in his temple, a revolver in his hand.

Police listed the case as suicide. They did not divulge the contents of a sealed note addressed to the hotel manager.

Pointing out that the Georgia Department of Labor ranks among the top four in the United States, he said his policy would continue to be "courtesy and service to the people of Georgia." His statement added:

"I take this opportunity to thank the people of Georgia for the privilege of serving them as their first elected Commissioner of the Department of Labor of Georgia and to announce that I have qualified as a candidate to succeed myself, subject to the Democratic white primary of September 11, 1940. I do so with full knowledge of the responsibilities of the office.

I feel no greater reward can come to any man than that which comes with duty well done. I have endeavored during my first term to administer the laws under my jurisdiction fairly, justly and impartially and for the benefit of all the people of this state. It is upon my record that I earnestly solicit the vote and influence of every person in Georgia.

ST. LOUIS, July 23.—(AP)—Andrew Frane, 61, who was declared legally dead last October, has returned to St. Louis to claim part of a $32,000 estate, his brother, Thomas Frane, disclosed today.

Andrew's whereabouts had been unknown to his family for 42 years. He arrived a few days ago from Long Beach, Cal.

Dr. J. M. Sutton, state veterinarian, yesterday warned Georgia farmers against over-working of mules and horses in the extreme heat.

He said reports coming to his office indicated a number of losses of horses and mules through heat strokes.

He urged frequent watering of animals, rest periods of from 15 to 30 minutes during the morning and afternoon, plenty of salt and generous feedings of good clean hay. He also said care should be exercised in using concentrated feeds during extremely hot weather.

Sabotage Effort Against War Relief Reported

F. D. R. Denies Supplies Are Falling Into Hands of Axis.

HYDE PARK, July 23.—(AP)—Reports from over the country of some form of "Fifth Column" effort to sabotage the raising of funds for the suffering people of Europe are reaching the Red Cross, President Roosevelt said today.

The reports are quite vague, Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference, but indicate that a rumor had been started that Red Cross relief supplies are falling into German and Italian military hands.

At the request of Norman Davis, Red Cross chairman, he said he was glad to say the reports were completely and utterly unfounded and that supplies were being distributed actually and physically to people in need.

Asked whether he had heard that Denmark was slaughtering a large amount of livestock, Mr. Roosevelt replied that unofficial and unverified reports had reached him two or three weeks ago that as much as 50 per cent of Denmark's cattle, sheep and poultry were being killed and the carcasses taken to Germany.

If the reports from Denmark are true, the President said, it naturally would be a pretty serious thing for the Danish people.

County System and Red Tape Held Two Chief State Defects

Fact Finders' Report Says Georgia Lacks Central Authority and Recommends 30 Instead of 159 Counties.

The two chief defects in Georgia's political system are its multitude of local units of government, principally counties, and its lack of central authority.

This is a summary of the state's problems, contained in a report prepared by the Citizens' Fact-Finding Movement of Georgia in which every aspect of its governmental system is considered.

"If some beneficent power should erase all county lines and obliterate all county sites, it would be a comparatively easy task to reform the political system so as to make it far more efficient and far less expensive," declares the study, made public yesterday. "Instead of 159 counties, Georgia might be divided into some 30 counties. In making such a division of the territory, consideration should be given not only to natural boundaries, but to economic conditions and to the convenience of citizens. The county site, as far as possible, should be approximately in the center of the county, and easily accessible from every part of it."

Advantages Named.

The fact-finding movement is composed of a group of state-wide organizations with a membership of 250,000 persons. The political analysis was made by a committee headed by Judge Orville Park, of Macon.

It is pointed out that the proposal would eliminate about three-fourths of the state's courthouses and jails; would reduce greatly the personnel of 2,500 engaged in county occupations, and would have beneficial effect on administration of justice, the character of legislation, efficiency of public services, and end much overlapping of city and county government.

The history of the present county system is described: "When the counties were first laid off, the idea was to make them small enough that any citizen riding a horse or driving a horse-drawn vehicle could go to the county site, attend to his business, and get back to his home by nightfall."

Plan Suggested.

It is suggested that consolidation could be effected by the favorable votes of a majority of those participating in an election held in the counties concerned at the request of one-fifth of the registered voters. Pointing to one specific advantage, the document inquires:

"Why should not schools, particularly high schools, be located for the convenience of the people regardless of county lines? Why should pupils from the county have to pass by the city high school and go miles farther to reach the county high school, and vice versa?"

Legislative Set-up.

Concerning the legislative set-up of Georgia, the report asserts: "(1) Representation bears no relation whatever to population. (2) The house of representatives is so large as to be unwieldy. (3) The entire personnel of the senate under the prevailing rotation system changes at each session, and the composition of the senatorial districts is such that, practically, the senate represents nothing."

It is declared unequivocally that the present distribution of representation "permits a very small minority of the people to elect a very large majority of both houses, thus partially disfranchising most of the citizens of the state."

In suggesting changes for the executive department, the report quotes Alexander Hamilton: "A feeble executive implies a feeble execution of the government. A feeble execution is but another phrase for a bad execution, and a government ill executed, whatever may be its theory, must be in practice a bad government."

Of the judiciary the investigators declare: "Perhaps no department needs

Leaders To Plan Bond Drive Today

Plans for acquiring the public with the need for the $4,000,000 city bond issue September 4 will be laid at noon today by members of the Grady hospital board of trustees meeting at Battle Hill sanatorium, Dr. J. Moss Beeler, Grady superintendent, announced.

Led by Thomas K. Glenn, board chairman, the group proposes to map a program to take the urgent needs of Grady and Battle Hill to voters prior to the election.

Of the $4,000,000 asked, the two institutions are to receive $2,000,000 if the issues are approved in the referendum, to be held on the same day as the municipal primary.

'Thar's Gold' For Workers, Pioneer Says

Ebb Chewning Started Off Without Dime; Gives Success Tips.

There are still some pioneers around. One anyway. At 69 he is firm in his conviction that opportunity exists for the enterprising and industrious individual. As he has not originally put it: "For thar's gold in them hills. Only dig it out."

Ebb A. Chewning, lean, alert, kindly, tells his life story without ostentation but with just pride.

It is an American story, with the familiar, yet never old, theme of hard work and application. He lived prosperously today in the place where he started out 41 years ago, four miles out from Decatur on the Lawrenceville road, but it wasn't always like that.

Farm Rent Free.

"I moved here from Atlanta about the year 1899 without a dime," he says, "to farm on 24 acres so poor the owner let me have it rent free for the first year. Next year I had to pay him $40, and the next year he wanted $60. I refused to pay it for I had built the place up so much he could then rent it to most anybody."

"So then he wanted to sell it to me, and I bought it for $10 an acre. Since, I have paid as high as $250 an acre."

"Now, the 24 acres had no house, so I rented a three-room house across the road for $25 a year. We lived in two rooms and I started my first store here in the other room. In order to get trade with such small stock I conceived the barter idea. I got out 'dodgers' and advertised I would exchange goods for anything they might have such as chickens, eggs, scrap iron, rags, bottles, bones, hides, skins, rabbits and what-have-you."

Wife Tended Store.

"It was a success from the start. I have had the store since, but now it is rented to another party. I have always farmed."

"My wife tended the store while I worked the farm. We sure had a time getting a start without capital, but 18 hours' work a day, good health and pretty good luck helped us make a go of it."

"All the time we were putting in something new. The third year I built a five-room house, which now has eight rooms."

He believes, and asserts, he was the first settler between Decatur and Tucker, in a region which now embraces a part of fashionable Druid Hills and the attractive towns of Chamblee, Doraville and Dunwoody, to accomplish these things.

Apply paint, storm sheeting and plaster to his house and equip it with screened doors and windows.

Install a telephone, in fact, two telephones in the days when there were competing services.

The First Piano.

Buy a graphophone. Install acetylene and later electric lights, a water system and modern equipment.

Engage in business as a storekeeper, real estate dealer, operator of a filling station with electric pumps, and market gardener.

He believes he bought the first piano and the first automobile thereabout.

"Now I have my eighth car," he relates. "I wore out the others and never had an accident."

Not only was his steam canner the first in that section but he is certain he was the world-originator of sweet potato canning, as well as preserving fresh apple cider in cans.

"I was the first to take a daily newspaper by rural free delivery," he adds. "Incidentally, it was The Constitution."

Looking back up on his accomplishments, this product of the days of individualism observes: "This is no more than any strong, determined young man can do today. There is no better place to start than right here in good old Georgia."

BATHING SUITS WANTED.

ALBANY, N. Y., July 23.—(AP)—With the nation in the grip of a heat wave, Mrs. Pernella Dunn, WPA district recreation supervisor, has sent out an appeal for children's bathing suits. Sizes wanted are from 8 to 15.

AMERICAN CITIZENSHIP

Citizens of the United States have always known that their citizenship was a valuable possession. In this country are realizing now, if they have not before, how valuable an asset American citizenship has become.

For those residents in the United States who have neglected heretofore to seek citizenship, many valuable forms of protection have become or are becoming unavailable.

If you are seeking citizenship and are not sure just how to proceed, you will find the information you seek in the comprehensive bulletin "Citizenship and Naturalization" and in the circular accompanying it, "Questions Asked of Prospective Citizens," both of which you can obtain from The Constitution's Service Bureau, by using the coupon below:

OPPORTUNITY LIVES

Georgia offers anyone with industry and application a chance for success. So believes Ebb A. Chewning, 69, who cites his record as a pioneer between Decatur and Tucker as proof.

People Warned Of World Peril By Witnesses

Convention Will Open Here, Seeking To Stave Off Disaster.

Advised as heralding, and possibly staving off, the approaching world disaster, a theocratic convention of Jehovah's Witnesses will open simultaneously in 32 cities today, one of them Atlanta.

Pre-convention publicity explains it thusly:

"World events are fast approaching the great and final climax foretold in the prophecies of the Bible and therefore it behooves everyone who wishes to live beyond the present trouble to learn all possible about the prophecies and shape one's life accordingly. In harmony with this thought, programs have been arranged so as to be instructive to all people of good will, and all such are invited to attend these sessions."

The Atlanta convention will be held at the municipal auditorium. Like the 31 others, it will run Wednesday through Sunday, and each afternoon will be tied in by direct wire with the "key" convention in Detroit to hear Judge Joseph F. Rutherford speak.

The morning and night sessions, according to Dr. J. A. Edwards, of Atlanta, will be given over to lectures and discussions of the prophecies. Approximately 2,000 persons are expected to attend the Atlanta meeting.

Judge Rutherford has described the witnesses as "not a sect, not a religious organization. They are in the class of faithful men mentioned in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews: whose sole purposes is to inform the people of God's purpose to establish a righteous government on the earth and in obedience to God's commandment to warn the people of the impending disaster upon the nations."

Members of the group have run afoul of patriotic organizations and the law by refusing to salute the flag. Their theological justification is that it is a form of "image worship."

RFC Offers Wright

Loan of $30,000,000

WASHINGTON, July 23.—(AP)—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation has offered to lend about $30,000,000 to Wright Aeronautical Corporation for plant expansion in connection with the national defense program, Jesse H. Jones, federal loan administrator, said today.

Jones said the loan had been offered several weeks ago on a basis of 4 per cent interest for an eight-year term, but that the company had not indicated whether it would take the money. He added that he presumed the company would arrange to obtain funds through private sources if it did not take the RFC loan.

Georgia To Get First U.S. Rural Rehousing Unit

Contract for Thomas County Farm Home Authorized.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., July 23. (AP)—Thomas county, in rural south Georgia, got the go-ahead signal today for construction of the nation's first low-rent farm home under the federal government's rural rehousing program.

Authorized for contract in Washington at a cost of $1,324, the five-room frame dwelling will be built on a one-acre plot, deeded to the Thomas county housing authority by its future tenant, low-income Farm-Owner Elbert B. Ellis.

The new home will be rented to Ellis for $50 a year, or approximately $4.17 a month. This, the government experts figure, will amortize the cost of construction over a period of 40 years, and pay probable repairs and other upkeep along the way.

To qualify under the government's program, Ellis agreed to raze the ramshackle, sub-standard house which was on the property and give title to the local housing authority on the one-acre area.

The USHA contract went to Price E. Jirright, Thomasville contractor, who agreed to build the five-room house, wire it for electricity, install a kitchen sink and construct an outside well and sealed privy. It will have a living room, kitchen and dining space, three bedrooms and storage space for food.

The dwelling is the first of 200 similar structures to be erected in Thomas county under a $357,000 loan approved by President Roosevelt and the USHA last March.

Five other states—Arkansas, Illinois, Indiana, Mississippi and South Carolina—have authorization for rural rehousing projects ranging from 200 to 300 units each, with total loan authorization of $2,522,000. None of these, however, have yet been placed in construction.

Kiwanis Urged To Honor New U. S. Citizens

International President Favors Special Day for This Purpose.

Setting aside of a special day to honor new citizens and give them certificates and copies of a manual of citizenship was advocated yesterday by Mark Smith, of Thomasville, Ga., president of Kiwanis International, in an address to Atlanta Kiwanians.

He urged that the American oath to the flag should be made compulsory in schools, and declared the country's ideals should be fostered through every possible channel.

Tennyson's conception of a world federation drew praise from the speaker.

"This is what is needed," he declared, "to pave the way to peace. We can best bring such a situation into existence by giving of our time and best efforts toward making better citizens of our boys and girls."

persons, who would instill in their minds any other than those principles and ideals upon which our great country was founded.

Seeks Road to Peace.

"It is our citizenship responsibility to find the road to peace and to put the feet of our youth on the right road if our America is going to continue; and no matter where we are, we must live the things in which we believe. We must be willing to sacrifice in order that these ideas may materialize. That is our price of liberty, our price of rendering a service. We can, as Kiwanians, do much to help the youth who are the custodians of America's future."

"We can do much to inspire them to carry on in the spirit of our founders and despite discouragements, and despite the attractive manner in which other 'ism' leaders may present their plan, God grant that we, as Americans, may find roads which all of us can travel to a better understanding of each other, and to greater service and happiness in the future."

"Let us teach them that there is no compromise with right or wrong, and neither is there any compromise with that person, or every obstacle which would tend to distract our youth from true Americanism; we must take some definite step to show our recognition of those young men and young women who have reached the age of 21, as well as those who become naturalized citizens."

Miss Burns To Be Presented At Terpsichorean Club Ball

ONE OF THE MOST attractive visitors in the city is blond and vivacious Jacquelyn Burns, of Charlotte, N. C., who is the guest of her uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. Grady Poole, in Druid Hills. Jacquelyn accompanied Mrs. Poole home from a weekend visit to Mr. and Mrs. Guy A. Burns, Jacquelyn's parents, and the minute the belle arrived in town the phone began ringing, with the result that her date-book is pretty well filled for her entire visit.

Jacquelyn has recently been accorded a social honor of distinction. The Terpsichorean Club, of Raleigh, N. C., has selected her as one of the ten Charlotte belles to be presented at its annual debutante ball on September 29. Each year, it seems, this exclusive social organization chooses a number of the most popular girls in each of North Carolina's larger cities to be formally presented to society, after a custom of 20 years' standing. The governor of the state is always an honor guest, and the affair surpasses in social brilliance any other event of the season.

Jacquelyn finished a two-year course at Salem Academy in Winston-Salem, N. C., in June, and after her formal presentation to North Carolina society, she will enter Sweetbriar College in Virginia.

THEY ARE both well known in tennis circles, and have numerous trophies to attest their prowess in the popular sport. The belle is a lovely exponent of the brunet type of beauty, and her naturally curly dark hair has inspired many a compliment from her friends and admirers.

The young man in question is as blond as his fiancée is brunette, and his steady courtship of her has led many to believe that wedding bells were not far distant. Although she now wears an exquisite solitaire on the telltale finger, she cannot be induced to tell when the wedding will take place!

Can you name them?

GLANCING THROUGH a recent edition of the Louisville Courier-Journal, Sally's eye was drawn by an attractive feature page, on which were posed participants and onlookers at the fourth annual Lexington Junior League Horse Show. The affair, which was held last week at the trotting track in Lexington, Ky., attracted horsemen from all over the country.

Atlantians in attendance who appeared in the photographs were Ben T. Smith, who was sitting with Charles T. Fisher, of Detroit, Mich., in the latter's box, and Lupton Veazey Rainwater, now of Highlands, N. C., who rode to glory for Zypor Farms. Lupton, who is well known for his horsemanship, is shown with a charming Indiana equestrienne, Nancy Moore, of Yorktown.

Teething is TERRIBLE

"I got the best mama in all the world. She knows just what to do for me when I suffer some of those little ills which come along when babies like me start teething. Mama gives me Teething when I'm temporarily constipated and when gas or a sour stomach give me colic pains, or when I eat the wrong kind of food and run off my bowels. Teething makes a big hit with me because it tastes good, and mama likes it 'cause twelve powders cost but five. The drug store man keeps plenty of Teething for us babies." Give Teething according to the directions in each package. TEETHINA.

Miss Carolyn Hogue Becomes Bride of Mr. Cunningham Jr.

St. Mark Methodist church formed the setting late yesterday afternoon for the marriage of Miss Carolyn Hogue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Hogue, and Herbert Gordon Cunningham Jr., son of Mrs. Herbert G. Cunningham and the late Mr. Cunningham, of Roanoke, Va.

The ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock by the pastor, Dr. Lester Rumble, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the young couple. As the guests were assembling and during the ceremony, a musical program was presented by Mrs. Robert Harris, organist, and Miss Lola Lawrence.

An effective background for the nuptials was formed of quantities of ferns, palms and other rich greenery. Interspersed among the greenery were tall baskets filled with white and pink gladioli. John Merry and J. W. Wrist were the ushers, and Mrs. Louis Grant Herrman, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was becomingly gowned in a model of pink embroidered organdy made of buffont style with Bishop sleeves. She carried an old-fashioned summer garden flowers.

Little Gayle Herrman, niece of the bride, was the junior bridesmaid, and was gowned in a miniature model, similar to that worn by her mother, the matron of honor. Her flowers formed a miniature nosegay. Entering with her father, Hunter Hogue, by whom she was given in marriage, the bride was met at the altar by the groom and James Hunter Hogue, who was best man. She was beautifully gowned in a model of white embroidered organdy made with long, full skirt, tight waist and short puff sleeves. The skirt widened to form a short train which gave an added note of buffont style. She wore a veil of illusion which fell in graceful folds from a coronet of pearls. The veil belongs to Mrs. C. L. Chandler, a sorority sister of the bride, who wore it as the "something borrowed" in her bridal ensemble. Her only ornament was an antique pearl and diamond brooch, an heirloom in the bride's family. She carried a prayer book showered with lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hogue entertained at a reception at their home on Thirtieth street for their daughter and Mr. Cunningham. The table in the dining room was covered with a linen cloth beautifully embroidered and edged with exquisite lace. The three-tiered cake was placed upon a mound made of pastel-shaded flowers. Assisting in entertaining were Misses Tallulah Davis, Marion Doom, Frances Mullen, Mary Boone, and Mrs. W. C. Bracken. Late last evening the bridal couple left for their honeymoon to Florida and will visit Ocala, Daytona Beach and Fernandina Beach. They will later go to New York, where they will reside. The bride traveled in a model of dusty pink crepe, with navy accessories, and her flowers were gardenias.

Mesdames Keith Quarterman, C. Robert Mitchell, Asa Patterson, Robert Edmond and Marion Pruitt are guests of Mrs. Cleveland R. Wilcox at her summer home at Lakemont.

St. Mark Methodist church formed the setting late yesterday afternoon for the marriage of Miss Carolyn Hogue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Hogue, and Herbert Gordon Cunningham Jr., son of Mrs. Herbert G. Cunningham and the late Mr. Cunningham, of Roanoke, Va.

The ceremony was performed at 6 o'clock by the pastor, Dr. Lester Rumble, in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends of the young couple. As the guests were assembling and during the ceremony, a musical program was presented by Mrs. Robert Harris, organist, and Miss Lola Lawrence.

An effective background for the nuptials was formed of quantities of ferns, palms and other rich greenery. Interspersed among the greenery were tall baskets filled with white and pink gladioli. John Merry and J. W. Wrist were the ushers, and Mrs. Louis Grant Herrman, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She was becomingly gowned in a model of pink embroidered organdy made of buffont style with Bishop sleeves. She carried an old-fashioned summer garden flowers.

Little Gayle Herrman, niece of the bride, was the junior bridesmaid, and was gowned in a miniature model, similar to that worn by her mother, the matron of honor. Her flowers formed a miniature nosegay. Entering with her father, Hunter Hogue, by whom she was given in marriage, the bride was met at the altar by the groom and James Hunter Hogue, who was best man. She was beautifully gowned in a model of white embroidered organdy made with long, full skirt, tight waist and short puff sleeves. The skirt widened to form a short train which gave an added note of buffont style. She wore a veil of illusion which fell in graceful folds from a coronet of pearls. The veil belongs to Mrs. C. L. Chandler, a sorority sister of the bride, who wore it as the "something borrowed" in her bridal ensemble. Her only ornament was an antique pearl and diamond brooch, an heirloom in the bride's family. She carried a prayer book showered with lilies of the valley.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hogue entertained at a reception at their home on Thirtieth street for their daughter and Mr. Cunningham. The table in the dining room was covered with a linen cloth beautifully embroidered and edged with exquisite lace. The three-tiered cake was placed upon a mound made of pastel-shaded flowers. Assisting in entertaining were Misses Tallulah Davis, Marion Doom, Frances Mullen, Mary Boone, and Mrs. W. C. Bracken. Late last evening the bridal couple left for their honeymoon to Florida and will visit Ocala, Daytona Beach and Fernandina Beach. They will later go to New York, where they will reside. The bride traveled in a model of dusty pink crepe, with navy accessories, and her flowers were gardenias.

Mesdames Keith Quarterman, C. Robert Mitchell, Asa Patterson, Robert Edmond and Marion Pruitt are guests of Mrs. Cleveland R. Wilcox at her summer home at Lakemont.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Ives and sons, Stephen Jr. and Atwood, leave Saturday for Kanuga Lake, N. C., where they have taken a cottage for several weeks. During her stay there Mrs. Ives will have as her guest, her niece, Miss Joan Duer, of Philadelphia.

All in The Game

BY JACK TROY

Tough Task Frank Howard, who was named to the head coaching position at Clemson when Jess Neely resigned to take over at Rice, is now looking for something about as easy to find as a needle in a haystack or a small rubber ball in the ocean. Howard is trying to locate a successor to Banks McFadden, Clemson's great All-America back.

He isn't worrying too much about it now, however. He has gone fishing and left the problem with the drugstore quarterbacks. He'll put his mind to the matter around September 1.

In order for a boy to be another McFadden, he must be over six feet tall. He must be able to run, punt, pass, and direct a team.

Listing candidates recently, Howard reported the following material will be available—

- (1)—A running, kicking back who can't pass.
- (2)—A running, passing back who can't kick.
- (3)—A kicking, passing back who can't run.

One of the chief headaches of a new head coach is to come into a job as a great star departs.

Even without McFadden, however, Clemson won't be one of the weaker teams around next fall. Or at least, that's the word from the Carolinas.

Local Problem Georgia Tech won't find it the easiest thing in the world to replace a boy like Buck Murphy, not to mention Howard Ector.

Captain Murphy probably was one of the country's most valuable backs last year. He seldom carried the ball. But he was a great aide to those who did (for his side) and a terrible pain to those who came through from the other side of the line.

Murphy was a great blocking and defensive back. And I imagine if you were able to pin down the Tech coaching staff, they'd tell you it will be a great deal harder to replace Murphy than any other departing player.

Ferdinand's Corner Nick CULLOP's batting average has dropped off to .266, but the old gentleman nevertheless leads the Texas league in runs batted in with 73. . . . He has slammed out

Kirby Has 76 To Win Medal At Asheville

Louise Suggs Does 82 To Win 3d Place in Qualifying.

By DOROTHY KIRBY. BILTMORE FOREST CLUB, July 23.—Today was one of those days that all participants in a tournament dread—qualifying day. A score of 99 got in and there were two other flights besides the championship.

There was due to be a third flight, in fact, there was one, but only one lady was in it. So she won it hands down.

The only Atlantans to make the championship were Louise Suggs, with 82; Mrs. W. D. Tumlin, with 99; Mrs. Sweeney, with 99, and myself, with 76. I came in with the low score for the qualifying medal.

37 AND 39.

I was out in 37 and back in 39. I was sort of rough going on the back side. As usual, I can look over the car and cut many a stroke off that 76. My shots were going pretty well. That makes two days in a row now that I have been hitting the ball. I can't understand it!

One thing that helps scoring is the fact that these greens are wonderful. They are as true as can be. Louise Suggs was playing much better today and really better than her 82 indicated.

She was going along smoothly until the seventh hole. Here is where her troubles started. Her drive was hooked in the woods and we thought the ball was lost after looking for it for a while. But as she went back to the tee to play another ball we found the first one before she hit the second ball. However, she played both balls out and got a six with the first and a seven with the second.

SUGGS IN TROUBLE. It was ruled that her second ball should be counted, so that gave her a seven. The eighth she three-putted and then took a five on the ninth. If all this hadn't occurred her score would have been much different. Anyway she finished third in the qualifying.

Jane Crum was second, with 79. Jane is from Orangeburg, S. C., and is only 18. It seems as though she will be hard to stop in this tournament, for she is hitting her shots.

The defending champ, Jane Cothran, slipped from her usual game and took an 83. Jane was out in 37 but had all sorts of trouble getting into the cups on the back side, and wound up with a 46.

Mrs. Tom Neblett is here. She is living in New Orleans now but once lived in Atlanta. She had a 90 which is away above what she usually shoots. The girl from Augusta, Eileen Stubb, shot a fine 87.

Barons Pound Adams, Defeat Volunteers, 7-3 BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 23.—(P)—The Birmingham Barons spanked Nashville, 7-3, here tonight behind Zack Schuessler's pitching for three out of four games in the series.

While Schuessler settled down after a shaky start, Adams permitted only one run in the fourth and was going strong until the seventh, when he hit the ceiling. Larry Gilbert yanked him after three runs came in, but it was too late.

Youth Lands Jumping Joe, 18-Pound Carp

Bobby Holloman Claims Season's Record for Piedmont's Largest.

Old Joe jumps all right. And Old Joe jumps by the clock. But there are lots of Old Joes gliding through the deep green waters of Piedmont lake.

This is a 39-cent way of exploding another myth—an afternoon paper myth that had Old Joe jumping to the stop watch.

The story had Old Joe, a whale-some sort of carp, unbending himself of the whole lake at certain specific intervals, say about every other week.

Bobby Holloman, an Atlanta messenger, roped a 14-pound carp last Saturday at the lake and it was feared Old Joe would leap no more. He went back Tuesday, gunning for bigger fish. He used the same lure, a wad of common dough. He didn't even use self-rising flour.

W. C. Bussey, another Atlanta boy, went along to beat Holloman's record. Shortly after 2 o'clock Old Joe went foraging. Bussey's dough was the easiest target. It was handy and the weather was too hot to swim far. So Joe took it lazily. But it bit and Joe and Bussey went to war.

When it ended, Holloman looked at his timepiece. "It's exactly 2:30," he observed. "This is exactly when I got 'im last—"

Wham! And wham again. Another Joe had struck. Holloman pulled him in—18 pounds of indolent fish with some of the scales torn off in the melee.

The Atlanta boy thus claims the season's record for the two largest carp taken on rod and reel. Old Joe, he figures, still swims. But there are a lot of fish in the lake named Joe.

33 POUNDS OF "JOES"—Piedmont lake is the scene of many fishing incidents. In the spring it yielded a 34-pound bass to a four-year-old girl. Yesterday two giant carp were taken from the municipal park waters. W. C. Bussey, left, holds his 15-pounder and Bobby Holloman muscles up an 18-pounder. Both fish were caught on hooks baited with "doughballs."

Cullop May Pilot Buffs Knee Throws Richardson

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Dixie Sports Shots: Al Smith, who beats the drums for L. S. U. athletic teams, is in town for a couple of days. . . . He reports Sonny Richardson, star of the all-star prep game here last summer, has been thrown for a loss by a bad knee. . . . The ex-G. M. A. fullback went great as a freshman but missed most of spring practice because of his knee. . . . Fun aplenty is being planned by the Shriners for "Shrine Night" Thursday at the ball park. . . . Festivities will start with luncheon honoring Joe Engel today.

Around the S. E. C.: There are only 10 letters on this year's Alabama gridiron squad. . . . Only five of the 58 candidates are seniors. . . . There is only one school in the league which doesn't want a commissioner, according to report. . . . Don't be surprised if Junior Steve Hughes plays more center this fall for Georgia than either Veteran Tommy Witt or Homer Passmore, the highly-publicized sophomore. . . . And before Georgia Tech finishes his season, the name of "Hardrock" Jordan is likely to be in the starting lineup at a guard post.

Contrast: While Jack Dempsey and Cowboy Luttrell were having their little party here recently, Gene Tunney and the Mrs. were applauding Lily Pons, the opera singer, in New York.

Diamond Doin's: Russ Peters is leading the Cleveland Indians in batting. . . . He is hitting .353, but has been up only 17 times.

Johnny Rizzo is making the pirates and Reds sad. . . . After both clubs decided they couldn't use him, he wound up with the Phillies and has hit 13 homers while batting an even .300.

Howard Pollett, the sensational Houston youngster who set a Texas League record by winning his first 12 starts of the season, recently won his 16th game. . . . he has lost four. . . . Incidentally, Eddie Dyer, who has managed the Buffs to their top position in the league, is being mentioned as the next St. Louis Cardinal pilot. . . . If and when it happens, Old Nick Cullop will take over at Houston.

Grant Defeats Bill Canning; Horn Is Upset

SEABRIGHT, N. J., July 23.—(P)—Two seeded performers—Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, and George Littleton-Rogers, of Ireland—were driven to the sidelines today in upset conquests as the annual Seabright Lawn Tennis Club tourney went into the round before the quarter-finals.

Isadore Bellis, of Philadelphia, outlasted Van Horn, 6-6, 6-8, 6-2. The second day was a good one for veterans all along the line. Former National Tennis Champion, William Hecht, erstwhile Czechoslovakia Davis cup ace; Bryan M. Grant, Atlanta, and Henry P. Prusoff, Seattle, survived extended tests.

Grant defeated Bill Canning, Alameda, Cal., 7-5, 6-4.

Vols, Wave, Tech Best, Says Mehre

UNIVERSITY, Miss., July 23.—(P)—Coach Harry Mehre, of Ole Miss, today marched out on a well-supported limb to favor Tennessee, Tulane and Georgia Tech for the 1940 gridiron campaign in the Southeastern conference.

If voting for a single team, Mehre said he would stick with the Rose Bowl Vols, adding, however, that he looked for the Sugar Bowl Greenies to show improvement, even over his fine cast of '39, and for Tech to continue to ball-handle the opposition into submission.

The Rebel maestro broadened his field by selecting Georgia and Louisiana State a "surprise" teams for the loop, and reinforced the theory that Mississippi State should be one of the leaders for '40.

THE MORTAL STORM

Emil Drives His Mother and Freya To the Mabergs in the Early Morning

By PHYLLIS BOTTOME.

THE MORTAL STORM. Accompanying her Communist lover, Hans Breiter, to the Austrian border as he is fleeing from the Nazis, Freya has seen him killed. Mistakenly she thinks that her stepbrother, Olaf von Rohn, and her aristocratic admirer, Fritz Maberg, who appears to be the same person, come to help Hans. Hans' death leaves Freya mentally and physically ill and she contemplates suicide until her father, a celebrated Jewish scientist, disavows her. Freya's younger brother, Rudolph, who had worshipped Hans, and Olaf, who has felt the menace of the Hitler regime, for in school he has been segregated from his classmates because of his Jewish and has been insulted and ostracized. Freya finds that Rudolph's grave at her bedside helps to bring Hans little more alive. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT IX.

"Perhaps Anton Kleinmetz," she said at last. "I do not know if he would help me—but if he would I should trust his work." Her father went at once to the telephone, and came back to tell her that Kleinmetz had consented. There was nothing left to do now, but for Freya to eat and sleep, until they started.

She still could not eat; but she drank some milk that her mother brought her from time to time, and for hours watched her mother moving softly about the room, collecting and packing her things. Her mother would not let Freya move from her bed to help her. The windows of the room were all closed.

There were no sounds in the street. The spring air blew softly behind the curtains. Once Freya caught a sudden gust of lilac and sweetness hurt her so that she cried out; but nothing else happened, and after a while her mother was still packing, Freya fell asleep.

When she woke on the day of her departure, it was broad daylight and all her senses were a curious blind fear, until she remembered.

She got up then, very quickly, and dressed, as if her life depended on rushing from one thing to another, without a moment's pause between.

It passed through her mind that she had not yet seen Emil, perhaps he was afraid that since she was a Nazi, she would hate to look at him. "But, after all," Freya thought to herself, "he was still—long before he was a Nazi—and even though he didn't help Hans, as Olaf did—he is still Emil!"

She was glad when she heard a knock at the door. He had brought her coffee, and prepared an early breakfast, to save her mother's getting up any earlier than she needed. When Freya smiled at Emil, he put down the coffee-cup very carefully on the dressing-table, and turning, kissed her so hard that he nearly knocked her down.

"You must eat something!" he said hurriedly, trying to butter the bread he brought her, nicely in the middle; and to please him Freya swallowed the first food she had eaten since Hans was killed; but she hurt her to swallow it.

Her mother was waiting in the hall, all dressed and ready, with a luggage bag, had brought down, and her father in his dress-gown hovered about like an enormous bumblebee, anxious to help but confused in his directions.

Rudolf still slept, and the servants were not yet downstairs. It was not so difficult to go away after all. Freya sat in front of the car with Emil, for if she sat behind, she knew it would remind her too much of the drive on the frontier with Olaf and Fritz Maberg.

The air was fresh and keen, and a thin gold light washed the new leaves.

Emil drove fast, so that Freya felt each thing as they passed, felt into every corner, and felt separate meanings. Houses ran to the sky—roads flashed into eyes—whatever they passed flashed by them like a racing wave. Freya did not have to be aware of anything, in such a range, peaceful jumble.

Once or twice Freya spoke to Emil about something usual, because she felt that he was still frightened of her pain, and had lost his guilty feeling. Talking of outside things made no difference to her at all, since Hans went on, and she was the same. Emil grew more and more reassured, and once he ventured on a joke, and Freya laughed quite easily.

"I can go on like this," she told herself, "all the while I am at myself—except when I am by myself—or alone with Mother." She knew that she could not deceive her mother by such tricks; and this would make it some day a great relief to be with her alone—and sometimes a great deal harder.

They took the least frequent road, out of Munich.

There was only one thing that Freya dreaded: She did not want to see "The Three Red Rabbits" again.

They passed it very quickly, Freya had barely time to recognize the little lane opening into an apple orchard, with its small corps on the farther side, rough which Hans had led her the dark. She shut her eyes, and it was gone.

They branched off quickly after that—away from the road they had taken towards the Esterstein.

All around them soft, green hills flooded to the foot of azure hills; white geese sparkled under chestnut trees by small ponds; red roofs bumbled together while the road whipped at them; and no cloud broke the sky's immovable blue calm.

Unless peasants, with sheep or cattle blocked the open road, so that they had to slow up and push their nose gingerly through the uncertain, clumsy mass, they went like the wind.

Freya thought once, with a feeling like relief: "Now I don't need ever again to mind about being killed!" Later she had felt so precious with happiness, that sometimes a little danger had shaken her steady nerve.

When they reached the long valley below Schloss Maberg, they stopped for a second breakfast, at a wayside inn. Freya felt hungry at last and was glad of the new laid eggs and rolls and butter, spread before them. In her desire to make Emil feel more comfortable still, so that he could really enjoy their breakfast, Freya made a mistake, she asked him suddenly: "Emil, do you know where the Nazis have sent Olaf and Fritz?" He looked so terrified that Freya felt quite sorry for him. His eyes fixed themselves helplessly on their mother and he began to stammer, but their mother said quietly:

"No doubt Storm Troopers are not allowed to speak of what their brother Brown Shirts are ordered to do—even when they know!"

And Emil muttered: "Well, it is better not!" and then brightening up, he added cheerfully: "I know they're all right, Freya—and we can send letters—addressed to their corps!"

Can Olaf answer? Freya persisted. "In time—oh, yes—of course, he'll answer!" Emil replied rather nervously, "and I dare say I shall be allowed to see them before long!"

He got up quickly and paid for their breakfast, as if it relieved him of something to do, that broke off their conversation.

"I suppose," Freya said to her mother as soon as Emil was out of earshot, "that one of the worst parts of having anything awful happen to one, is that it makes the people you love best, feel strange to you! Emil behaves as if he had just met me for the first time!"

Her mother smiled at her with an answering irony. "For the young to share grief is difficult," she admitted, "for they are not—or should not be used to it; but you are the same to me and to your father, forever!"

"Yes, I know that!" Freya admitted, and felt for the first time vaguely comforted. Losing the enormous value of what she had been to Hans, had seemed to make her useless to everyone else. She had not only lost him, she had lost what she had meant to him. It was as if—without ever having abdicated—she had been de-throned.

After her mother's words, Freya felt a new flicker of hope: perhaps she was not, after all, so wholly valueless, even though Hans was dead.

At last the dazzling prize that had been dangling over her head for so long, had fallen into her lap! But this prize of Olaf's love did not lie there passively, a mere tribute to her maiden charms; it developed an awkward life of its own. Prize or no prize, Olaf's love was going to be as difficult a possession as Sophie had found it unpossessed.

Day by day, Olaf expected more from her—and not at all the kind of things that an engaged lover should have expected. For Olaf, to be a Nazi, was not a fashionable form of government—it was a spiritual crusade; and he seemed to think that Sophie wanted to share it. When she heard that Olaf was to be imprisoned in a fortress up to the date of their marriage, it came upon Sophie with a positive shock of relief.

Now she could buy what clothes she liked for her trousseau—she could settle upon expensive furniture for the Munich flat; she could even find quite conclusive reasons for having a much larger flat, in a more expensive quarter, than the one Olaf had already suggested.

Once married, this problem of handling Olaf, so that Sophie could get the maximum of satisfaction with the minimum of effort, would be safely over. Husbands are legally there, whether you please them or not, nor is it very easy for them to be elsewhere.

Sophie's real pleasures would then begin; she would be Fritz von Rohn; she would have more money than she had ever possessed; and prettier clothes would be ordered, whether Olaf liked it or not. She would entertain; and—by buying expensive substitutes—make meatless days not so much of a sacrifice. She would have a very handsome, respected young husband to go about with, and love—this precious, aching, glittering substance—could be left to look after itself.

Sophie did not actually formulate these thoughts, while sitting in her mother's boudoir waiting for her father to return from Munich after his visit to headquarters, but the sense of them floated through the open windows with the soft spring air.

Fortress prisons are not very uncomfortable, and Olaf and Fritz were to have their food sent in from an excellent restaurant in the neighborhood.

The Grafen sat near her daughter, reading a French novel, and casting from time to time a speculative eye at a small gold traveling clock at her elbow. It meant more to her mother, Sophie knew, to have her coffee punctually at four-thirty, than that Hungary should regain her lost provinces; and this is saying a good deal for a patriotic Hungarian. Sophie sympathized with her mother, her own mind worked on parallel lines. She sewed delicately upon a filmy garment for her trousseau; and hoped that her father would have the sense to bring back a box of chocolates, as well as the latest news of Olaf.

"If your father is late," the Grafen at last observed, "it is to be supposed that he will have had coffee on the way. Bad coffee, of course, but his is not a discriminating nature! I told Maria to give him five minutes' grace. Should she wait longer than this, I must ask you to ring the bell to remind her of the time. It is a very serious thing—as you will find—when you start housekeeping—to allow a maid-servant to postpone a meal. Still, one should always consider one's husband—up to a certain point."

This remark seemed to Sophie to open up an interesting field for discussion. She gazed long and curiously at her mother, who had already survived a quarter of a century of married life and looked none the worse for it. The Grafen's hair was not grey, her complexion was unimpaired, and her tranquillity of so deep a nature that it indicated an untroubled history.

"I have often wondered, mamma," Sophie said, neatly biting off her tongue, "how much one should give to one's husband. I don't mean about love-making, of course—one knows all that by instinct! Besides, Olaf is almost tirelessly controlled. I have never been able to make him lose his head once. I shall have children, of course—two, like you, I think—so I hope one will be a boy—but not at once, whatever Olaf thinks—and as for this idea of the Nazis, about large families—I find it simply revolting! Peasants no doubt should—and can—have litters—but not people in our class! What I do mean quite know is how much one can afford not to do what a man wants—without really upsetting him? Olaf wants such different things from me! And keeps on so about labor camps—and the spirit of fraternity, although it means mixing with quite common people. It's not what I mean by entertaining, having camps full of Boy Scouts or gymnasium contests thrust upon us!"

She and Sophie had no illusions about one another. Neither had ever been able to get much out of the other. Each had fought for supremacy; and having failed, had given up the secret contest with-out antagonism. Now they merely respected each other, and went their separate ways; but there were more subjects upon which they agreed than upon which they disagreed.

"It is an interesting problem," the Grafen murmured thoughtfully, "but it is a pity that you cannot make Olaf lose his head. Such accidents help a young bride greatly! I have noticed these modern young men seem to have very weak passions! However, you may find later on that you can shake Olaf more than you now suppose. He has a rigid and controlled nature. Still, such an attitude on a man's part is quite suitable towards a young girl before marriage. He may let himself go all the more—afterwards—that type of man often does, and you then have something to draw on! I should, however, not emphasize the difference in your wishes—either now or later."

Barbara Land, Who Played in 'Virginia City,' at Airport.

By DEEZY SCOTT.
Flying stars, either of the radio or screen, are frequent visitors at the municipal airport and yesterday Miss Barbara Land, who said she sang at KMTB in Los Angeles, Cal., and played in "Virginia City" with Randolph Scott, arrived from a vacation in Cuba en route to her home in Hollywood.

Miss Land was worried about a cold, which will have its effect on her soprano voice. "I got the cold in Cuba, not on the planes, though," she added.

Other folks with lots of Florida tan piled out of the big ship from Jacksonville. Three Newnan girls who returned from a house party at Atlantic Beach were May King, Mary Davis and Bessie Mann. King, another vacation home-comer from Florida, was Marion Smith, and winking their way out of town were Charles M. Graves, recreational planner of the National Park Service, whose headquarters are in Atlanta, but who headed for Tallahassee, Fla. and thence to Montgomery and Birmingham. He will confer first with the Florida commission on the proposed Suwannee River National Park, and will aid in the Birmingham arrangements for a Negro recreational area.

S. S. Scranton, publisher of a home economics magazine, returned to his home in New York after a short stay here in business. "I'm not looking for writers, just advertisers," he said. Mrs. Scranton, who left Monday by plane for New York, is secretary to Captain Eddie Rickenbacker.

Arriving from New York on his way to Mobile, Ala., was E. M. Lehman, who said he is no kin to the governor of his state but wishes he was, in an industrial engineer. "I'm not going over there to build anything, but we might get around to tearing something down," the New Yorker said.

A "first flight" on the airlines was Bobby Troutman Jr., who left for Baltimore, Md., with his father on a business trip. Bobby Troutman Jr. was calm about his first plane trip. "I'm not nervous—no comment," he concluded.

Learns That Ancient Old Wives' Remedies Have Some Merit.

Whenever I discourse of doctors and the science of medicine I am immediately informed by representatives of the profession that my ignorance of the subject is abysmal. To which I retort that other subjects are equally terra incognita, but I've got to write something or apply to government for relief.

So I make haste to credit the following scientific remarks to the Herald-Tribune, of New York. Carping critics may write to that widely known newspaper if they so desire.

The H-T editorial writer said a group of learned authorities had discovered certain ancient old wives' remedies contained some merit. An old home remedy for nosebleed—a piece of salt pork—actually seemed to work. A flaxseed poultice really would—sometimes—remove objects from the eye. And a poultice of mud was good for bee stings. And, on top of all that, there is a considerable amount of sense in the grand old mixture of sulphur and molasses for children in the spring. So there!

I hope this group of learned authorities continues to delve into tradition. I would rejoice to know that—by indorsement of the American Medical Society—a buckeye carried in his pants pocket will ward off rheumatism. I hope that is true. If so, it is fortunate that the feminine sex doesn't suffer to any alarming extent from rheumatism—but I am treading on dangerous ground.

I would like at this juncture to discuss the virtues of preventing various maladies of a small bag of ascofita suspended from the neck, but I don't know how to spell ascofedita and I doubt whether the linotype does. So I'll refrain. But I will say—without fear of a successful contradiction—that if an apple a day will keep the doctor away a bag of ascofedita will render the wearer a recluse, a hermit or one of those folk whose best friends won't tell him. We had a maid once—for one day. But why go into that. After a 24-hour airing the home was again a place to live in. With the windows open.

Slight Error.

Mrs. Fannie Lou Harris, of the Marietta Journal, was in the throes of a heavyweight article when three Negro boys entered, bearing a tow sack. She had an idea somebody was sending a bushel of potatoes for a subscription until one of the visitors produced a long and slippery snake.

"Here's your king snake," announced the spokesman.

Mrs. Harris disclaimed any desire for a snake, dead or alive.

"But you had an ad in your paper," the trio insisted.

That stumped the office force. Finally one bright mind solved the problem.

"Don't you remember that ad we ran for the florist?" he suggested. "He wanted to buy some cane stakes."

The trio departed with their serpent. But probably if they'd stuck around the square they would have found a customer. King snakes are popular with farmers—some farmers—because they're guaranteed to keep rats out of barns and corn cribs. They are said to be friendly fellows. But personally I'd rather have a few rats. If I felt a snake coiling around my ankles and climbing up to lick my hand in semi-darkness I'm sure I wouldn't have time to observe whether he was good old Mike or a total stranger of unknown habits and disposition. I'd be breaking records for running high and broad jumps.

I'd be breaking records for running high and broad jumps.

I'd be breaking records for running high and broad jumps.

I'd be breaking records for running high and broad jumps.

I'd be breaking records for running high and broad jumps.

I'd be breaking records for running high and broad jumps.

Heat Got You Gasping? Dive in the Drink

COME ON IN! The water, chums, is fine! That is doubtlessly the invitation behind the enthusiastic waving of these sturdy youngsters enjoying a splash out at Bert Adams Scout Camp.

OVER OVERCAST Clouds are no barrier to Flying Cadets at Randolph Field, Texas, "West Point of the Air." High atop a broken layer of clouds, a cadet runs through daily maneuvers.

DECORATED Mr. Roosevelt usually does the medal pinning, but here Cecil Halpin, noble grand of Park Lodge, Hyde Park I. O. O. F., decorates him in recognition of 25 years' membership.

COOL SHOULDER That's what comely Rosa-mond Murray, of New York, noted society horsewoman, turns to the heat in this bathing suit with one shoulder strapped, one bared to breeze.

WHEE! Heat may be well-nigh insufferable in the windless, stone-rimmed canyons of Atlanta's streets, but not so many miles away there's a cooling oasis—in the pool out at Bert Adams Boy Scout Camp.

WINGED They've just won their pinions, have these members of the Women Flyers of America, by soloing. With the smiling threesome is Lieutenant Commander Don Smith, New York aviation officer.

ON ROCKS At least, the ship in which she was cruising the sea of matrimony has wrecked. She's Greta Granstedt, of the films, and she plans to seek a divorce from Max De Vega, scenic artist.

Hopes Two Pints Not Enough Evidence To Convict Bud.

I have a case for the Civil Liberties Union. I wish they would lay off all efforts to obtain for Communists and Nazis their constitutional rights until they can get the fellow who can whinny like a stallion out of the Chase county jailhouse.

This case came to my attention after we had pulled up to the curb in front of the big stone Chase county courthouse in Cottonwood Falls, Kan., and were listening to the regular Friday night concert of the Chase county band on the courthouse lawn. Most of them are very cute high school girls in shorts with sunburnt legs, but they are helped out by a few old bald-heads who play the more complicated instruments.

Together they gave a rousing performance of the "National Emblem March" with the audience parked around the square in cars, and a few farmers in surreys and rigs. The barred windows of the jail are on the second floor of the courthouse. Its single occupant has his light turned on, so you could see him plainly, hanging onto the bars, listening to the "National Emblem March."

Whinny Returned.

When it was through, everybody honked their horns for applause, except the fellow in the jailhouse who, having no horn, whinnied instead. Immediately a couple of apparently despondent old sorrel mares whinnied back with keen interest.

I asked who it was they had in the jailhouse now. The fellows in the crowd agreed that it was probably still Bud. Because while Chase county has at least a dozen expert whinniers, only Bud is good enough to fool a mare and get her to whinny back.

Bud's case, they agreed, was surrounded with unusual interest. The law picked Bud up a while back for selling pints—the back seat of his car had been almost level full of them—and since court was not sitting they had locked Bud up in one cell and stacked his pints in the far corner of the other locked cell as evidence, pending trial. Naturally this was pretty dull for Bud. When some of his friends asked to go up and play pinocle with Bud in the evening to cheer him up, the law could hardly make objection. There was nothing out of the ordinary about the boys wanting to cheer up Bud.

Cheer Bud Up.

The curious thing was that an increasingly large group of Bud's friends, including some indifferent pinocle-players who were hardly more than acquaintances, began to arrive regularly every evening to cheer Bud up with a little game. This was unusual because Bud is not only the best whinnier in Chase county but also the best pinocle player, and you would hardly think that cheering Bud up regularly with a little game would get expensive for some of them.

Anyway, the law thought so. One day he walked in unexpectedly, and discovered that the fellows who had been cheering up Bud had also rigged up a long piece of wire with a hook on the end, and had been snagging the pints, one by one, out of the other cell, raking them across the floor through the bars, with the result that all the evidence against Bud had by now been drunk up, with the exception of two pints. Bud's friends now feel that no Chase county jury will ever convict a man of Bud's standing in the community on so small an amount of evidence.

So I wish a couple of smart New York Civil Liberties lawyers would stuff their pyjamas and a toothbrush in their brief cases and hustle on out here, so that the best whinnier and pinocle player in Chase county won't have to do any more time, when all they have against him is only two pints.

Pétain Orders Daladier Trial, Other Arrests

Action Taken Because of Roles in 'Declaring and Continuing' War.

VICHY, France, June 23.—(UP) The French regime of Marshal Henri Philippe Pétain tonight ordered the arrest and trial of former high government leaders, including former Premier Edouard Daladier, because of their roles in "declaring and continuing the war" against Germany.

Pétain's council of ministers also ordered the withdrawal of citizenship and confiscation of the property and fortunes of all Frenchmen, including Daladier, who fled France after May 10, when Germany's invasion of the Low Countries began.

The trials will be part of a "domestic moral purge" of France by Pétain's new authorization regime, it was stated officially, and may affect thousands of central European refugees who have found haven in France during the past 13 years.

The purge of "those responsible for the war," besides Daladier, also will place on trial Georges Mandel, former minister of interior; Cesar Campinchi, former minister of navy, and Yvon Delbos, who occupied the cabinet posts of foreign minister and minister of national education at various times preceding the war.
